Loyalists Forced From Peak in Hand-to-Hand All-Day Battle.

Insurgent Assault On Salient Fails

Counter-Attack Seeks to Split Franco's Army, Raise Siege.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 21.—Insurgents gained complete possession of Hill No. 660, captured in their advance yesterday, by repulsing government troops who tried to retake it in a bloody battle tonight.

Close-quarter fighting was desperate during the day, when Government infantry twice swarmed to the peak's top and twice were driven back by withering machine-gun and rifle fire.

The government said insurgent reinforcements from Villafranca del Castillo finally forced the government troops to abandon their attack.

The strategic hill is east of Villanueva de la Canada, which lies about 15 miles west of Madrid. The town was taken in the government drive two weeks ago and the troops of Insurgent Generalissimo Franco are trying to regain it.

Insurgent Drive Fails.

The insurgents before daybreak advanced westward in an effort to capture Villanueva de la Canada and cut through a government salient to demoralize the defenders of government-held Brunete a few miles south. The government reported its forces not only defended Villanueva de la Canada, but also were able to launch several counter-attacks.

Brunete, Quijorna and Villafranca del Castillo, northwest of Madrid, were sectors where the bitter fighting of the last few days continued unabated. From Brunete the government can threaten the towns of Sevilla la Nueva and NavalCarnero, about 20 miles southwest of Madrid.

Government troops also drove toward Villafranca del Castillo, 15 miles northwest of Madrid, attempting to widen the bottle neck of their western salient and eventually break the insurgent siege of Madrid.

Government officers said the insurgents had lost 10,000 men, dead and wounded, in the fighting west of Madrid.

Insurgent gains of a half-mile strip near Brunette Sunday and a hill overlooking Villanueva de la Canada yesterday were said by government officials to be insignificant compared with the insurgent losses of men and war supplies.

Cease Daring Tactics.

Government officials estimated the insurgents had thrown war supplies costing 100,000,000 pesetas (about $5,000,000) into the desperate attack. Miaja's headquarters was even more pleased by the fact Gen. Franco had been forced to throw his insurgent war machine against Madrid rather than some less-strongly defended objective such as Santander on the north coast.

The insurgent failure to take Brunette, the government position menancing insurgent communication lines to Madrid, was seen by government officers as possibly marking a turning point in the civil war's military operations.

If Miaja's troops could thrust the western salient on the south past Getafe, the insurgent siege line would be severed from the main insurgent army and the government might lift the eight-month siege of Madrid, they said.

Insurgent fire at Brunette was described as having been even heavier than the attack which captured Bilbao, but government machine-gunners were sticking to their posts.

A change in insurgent tactics from the previous audacious advances in sweeping infantry attacks was noted by government officers.

They said the insurgents, facing an intrenched, well-armed foe, are now using the limited objective method practiced by the French World War armies.

Concentrating the heaviest air and artillery bombardments on a small objective, the aim is to make it almost impossible for the defending troops to maintain their position and then send infantrymen to

U. S. Flier Escapes Soviet Visa Penalty

Moscow, July 21 (AP).—Clyde Pangborn, American aviator who was detained two days for entering Soviet Russia without a passport visa, not only escaped deportation, but made progress selling the government some airplanes.

He came today from Velikieluki Airport, where he was held under guard while Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, straightened out the visa matter. Soviet officials said Pangborn was the first foreigner to enter the country without a visa and escape deportation.

Pangborn made an engagement with Soviet aviation officials to discuss a new type of plane he is promoting and invite them to a demonstration in London next week. Pangborn joined Sirovich at Stockholm Sunday and the two Americans rode a regular airliner to Moscow. They are going to Praha, Czechoslovakia, Friday.

Miss Daingerfield Is Allotted $825 Monthly Income

Corporation Judge William P. Woolls, of Alexandria, has approved an allowance of $825 a month for Miss Mary Daingerfield, central figure in a long drawn out struggle for control of the $2,000,000 estate of the late Edward L. Daingerfield, The Post learned last night.

Judge Woolls, the same magistrate who last April entered an order holding Miss Daingerfield insane, approved the allowance to the 55-year-old heiress at the end of a secret hearing conducted in Alexandria yesterday.

Miss Daingerfield, it was learned meanwhile, has registered at the Mayflower Hotel after spending several weeks in a quiet retreat in North Carolina.

An order confirming approval of allowance from the estate of $700 per month, use of her car and an additional $125 a month for chauffeur hire, is to be signed by Judge Woolls this morning.

At the hearing yesterday, Miss Daingerfield was represented by Attorney Paul L. Delaney. Her maintenance request was opposed by Attorney Barton Phillips, representing Mrs. Sally V. Stirling, Miss Daingerfield's sister.

Attempt to Kill JapaneseEnvoy To China Fails

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, July 21.—Chinese troop withdrawals from the Wanpinghsien battle zone west of Peiping tonight eased Sino-Japanese tension in North China.

In Tokyo, the newspaper Hochi reported from Tientsin an alleged attempt to assassinate Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe and the Mayor of Tientsin had been frustrated by Japanese consular police.

The newspaper said officers arrested Chinese Col. Bai Shou-tang when he visited Kawagoe's hotel. They charged him with planning to kill the ambassador.

Col. Bai, the dispatch said, was formerly a staff officer under Gen. Feng Yu-ksiang, vice chairman of the military affairs commission of the Nanking (Central) Chinese government.

Two weeks after conflict started in the area, almost all soldiers of the Chinese twenty-ninth army were evacuated under an agreement calling also for withdrawal of Japanese troops.

Batteries Silent.

Chinese said late tonight the next 24 hours may tell whether the Japanese will fulfill their part of the bargain or attempt to occupy the demilitarized zone.

They declared such occupation would give the Japanese control of the northern terminal of the strategic Peiping-Hankow Railroad.

The Sino-Japanese understanding provided for withdrawal of Japanese troops after Chinese regulars in the area had been replaced by officers entrusted with maintenance of civil order.

Japanese maintained watch during the day as the Chinese soldiers departed. Machine-gunners guarded trenches behind which batteries of howitzers were trained on Wanpinghsien.

Seecondary batteries pointed north toward Peiping.

No firing was heard from the Japanese front lines except one outburst from a machine gun near Wanpinghsien, which went unanswered.

It was estimated there were between 14,000 and 15,000 Japanese troops in the area. South and east of Peiping, Japanese positions were being strengthened with the erection of earthworks and barbed wire entanglements.

Batteries were camouflaged as a precaution against possible air attacks.

Trucks which transported troops and munitions to the front from the Fengtai field headquarters were covered partially with branches, while soldiers disguised their steel helmets under leaves.

U. S. Volunteers Called.

Maj. Takioimai, assistant Japanese military attache in Peiping, was stated to have been one of the observers of the Chinese withdrawal.

The Fifteenth United States Infantry meanwhile was ordered to stand by under full war packs to defend American citizens and interests.

All able-bodied American men were urged by the United States Consulate to form a volunteer company to reinforce the garrison.

In event of emergency, one of the tasks of the American troops would be to keep open the railroad to the eastern seaport of Chinwangtao.

(The Sino-Japanese understanding for troop withdrawals was said in Nanking to be only an oral compact under which both sides would evacuate the trouble zone "as an evidence of good faith.")

Enraged Man Kills Two and Is Slain

Lichfield Park, Ariz., July 21 (U.P.).—A Mexican cotton picker, fired for drunkenness, killed a cotton camp foreman and a deputy sheriff, and then was killed by another foreman near here today.

While 200 workers watched from their shacks, Jose Maria Castellano, 35, shot and killed his foreman, J. R. Murdock, 51, then murdered Deputy Sheriff E. J. Roberts, 52, who tried to arrest him. Ed C. Meyers, 60, foreman of a nearby camp, raced to the camp when he heard the shots. Stopping about 150 feet away, he leveled a deer rifle and shot Castellano above the heart.

Overhauling Of D. C. Tax Setup Urged

Assessment, Collection Laxity Is Scored by Committee.

Assurance that the omnibus District tax bill will be acted on by the Senate very soon, probably next week, came from Chairman King, of the District Committee, after conferences with Senate leaders yesterday.

The day's developments on the court reform bill appeared to be paving the way for the local tax measure, which has been tied up for a fortnight by the former.

"I feel sure everything will work out in a way that will permit us to call up the District tax bill early next week," Senator King said.

The District Committee chairman is so confident of success he will not press the emergency loan resolution unless some further hitch arises to block the tax measure.

Meanwhile, at the District Building a special committee of officials and citizens recommended a thorough overhauling and modernization of the city's tax assessment and collective machinery.

Urge 15 Changes.

The committee was highly critical of the District's failure to collect thousands of dollars in delinquent levies on personal property. It recommended 15 legislative changes to obtain more effective tax collections.

Other developments in the local tax tangle included an appeal from Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, for full committee support when he calls up the loan bill again on Monday in the House, and a proposal by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, that Washingtonians be given "the right to spend their own tax money without Congressional dictatorship."

Shafer, a member of the District Committee, explained he had changed his mind regarding District self-rule after witnessing the anti-District demonstration in the House Monday.

"I do not believe Congress should surrender autonomy over the District," Shafer said. "Rather, I believe it should shed itself of a task which manifestly has proved distasteful and which most members have demonstrated they know too little about to perform successfully."

Shafer suggested the powers of the Commissioners could be broadened, even to the point of giving them sole budgetary control, save where national policies are involved.

Palmisano Lectures Aides.

"Monday's defeated bill in itself was an admission on the part of Congress that it is incapable of handling the District's affairs, and the action proves that it is also unwilling to permit the citizens to do the job themselves," he added.

Palmisano earlier lectured the District Committee for its failure to support him at Monday's session and appealed to them to turn out en masse on Monday.

He also disclosed he had asked Auditor Daniel J. Donovan to submit a brief report on the history of past Federal loans to the District so as to be prepared for questions which went unanswered Monday.

Generally speaking, the report of the special tax committee suggested broadening the powers of the Commissioners, lessening the personal liability of the tax collector and oiling the collection cogwheels to promote efficiency.

Highlight of the report was its recommendation that "a vigorous effort" be made to collect personal taxes.

The report assailed the present system of collecting personal taxes, pointing out that the accumulated total of unpaid personal property taxes, including that on utilities and banks, amounts to $4,114,365, while unpaid real estate taxes, over a period of 59 years, total only $518,838.33.

To correct this situation, the committee recommended legislation be enacted authorizing the tax collector to attach banked funds and intangible property in addition to goods, and in effect authorizing him to place a lien on the real property of a personal tax delinquent.

In discussing the collection system, the committee charged little effort is being made to collect un-

Primary Sought To Fill Robinson Vacancy in Senate

Little Rock, Ark., July 21 (AP).—Robert Prather, of Vimy Ridge, member of the State Democratic executive committee, said tonight "ugly rumors are going around" that Gov. Carl E. Bailey "would have himself" nominated for the United States Senate by the State committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Joseph T. Robinson.

Prather, declaring he would lead a fight to have Robinson's successor named at a primary, was the first committee member to commit himself on the question.

"Surely the Governor," he said, "can't afford to throw himself so completely in reverse—go against all his preachments of the past."

The committee session which will settle the nomination-vs.-primary issue is scheduled for Friday. A citizens' committee advocating a primary announced that several hundred backers would attend the session.

Kentuckian Victor Over Harrison by Margin of Single Ballot.

Sen. Bilbo Causes Colleague's Defeat

Renews Ancient Feud to Swing Decision at Party Caucus.

By Sidney Olson.

Boom-voiced Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, whose ambition some 50 years ago was to become a clerk in a country dry goods store, yesterday was chosen as leader of the Senate Democrats in a closed-doors caucus by a vote of 38 to 37.

The heavyset Kentuckian, 59 years old, nimble-witted in debate and with a record of going down the line for the New Deal with but one exception, was elected leader in a contest unprecedented in tenseness and significance in Senate history.

The one-vote margin of victory over his opponent, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, the "Old Gray Fox" of the Senate, came only when the last tiny white card had been drawn from the hat.

Bilbo's Vote Decides.

Barkley won because Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, of Mississippi, voted against Harrison, his own colleague. The Bilbo-Harrison feud goes back a long way. When Bilbo was merely a Mississippi constituent of his, Harrison secured "The Man" a job in the Postoffice Department's clipping bureau. But back in 1923 Bilbo had been an important witness in a seduction case. He refused to appear and Federal District Judge Edwin R. Holmes sentenced him to a ten-day sentence for contempt of court.

Last year Harrison supported President Roosevelt's nomination of Holmes to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. Bilbo took this as a personal affront, and, after failing in an attempt to block the nomination, vowed, it is said, to avenge himself on Harrison.

Last fall he stumped throughout Mississippi in behalf of former Gov. Mike Sennett Conner, who opposed Harrison for re-election. Yesterday Bilbo, once a Baptist minister and twice Governor of Mississippi, said:

"Harrison hasn't spoken to me since the last election. He didn't ask me to vote for him. He probably thought he didn't need me. I pledged my vote to Barkley anyway, several months ago, when we thought Senator Robinson would go to the Supreme Court."

Barkley, the only Democratic orator in history who has been a keynoter at two national party conventions, was supported by Administration followers generally, while court bill opponents in general backed Harrison.

Both Visit White House.

Both pledged themselves to close the party split brought about by the President's moribund court reorganization bill. At the close of the swift secret balloting, Harrison moved that the vote be made unanimous. This was done. Harrison then shook Barkley's hand and said:

"I congratulate you, old boy. We've got to fight together for the progress of our country and the success of the Democratic Party."

Barkley, moved, answered, "Thanks, Pat. We've been fighting together since the Wilson Administration, and this is the only occasion I can remember when our interests were separate."

Later both went together to the White House for a long interview with the President. When they finally came out, apparently in a very pleasant mood, Barkley was wearing Harrison's hat, but Harrison noted the transfer of headgear in time to demand his own back.

7 Are Acquitted In Md. Bonding Racket Charge

Proof of Conspiracy Is Lacking, Defense Counsel Argues.

After hearing evidence for six days in the conspiracy trial at Upper Marlboro, Md., a Prince Georges County jury yesterday deliberated 40 minutes and acquitted seven defendants on all counts.

Those found "not guilty" were Herbert J. Moffat, former justice of the peace at Hyattsville, Md.; Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman of Suitland, Md.; Frank Bell, former desk clerk at the Hyattsville substation; and Warren Peake, Claude Reese, Albert Anderson and Arthur Brown, all former county police officers.

Indicted Last December.

The defendants were indicted last December by a county grand jury after a lengthy investigation of an alleged "bargain-fine" system. In addition to the blanket indictment on which the men were tried, there are additional individual presentments. Bowie said yesterday he had not decided what would be done with the remaining indictments.

In its arguments to the jury, defense counsel declared that the prosecution had failed to show any evidence of conspiracy between the indicted men.

When the trial began on July 12, there were nine men under indictment. Charges against Howard Slater and Maurice Hampton, both former policemen, were nolle prossed by State's Attorney Alan Bowie, when no witnesses appeared to testify against them.

The defense rested its case yesterday morning after Anderson, Reese, Brown and Bell had testified in their own behalf. They flatly denied prosecution charges.

Merrick Surprise Witness.

In a surprise move, the prosecution placed Police Court Judge George B. Merrick on the stand as a rebuttal witness.

Merrick refuted statements by Moffat that he had reduced charges in two cases after the late J. Wilson Ryon, Riverdale attorney, had told him the court had ordered the changes.

The police court judge told the jury he had not instructed Ryon to have the charges reduced.

One other witness, William A.

Hostages Kill Dozing Kidnaper, Shoot Other to End Man Hunt

By the Associated Press.

Boswell, Okla., July 21.—Two cool-headed hostages caught their jail-fleeing kidnapers asleep today and shot them down—the dramatic end of a week's hunt of nearly 1,000 officers and bloodhounds.

Fred Tindol, fugitive from a Texas prison farm, was killed and Roy "Pete" Traxler, slippery Southwestern gunman, was wounded dangerously by their own guns when they switched their attention from the kidnaped men and fell into an exhausted doze.

"I hated to do it," said Frank Trimmer, 50, farmer, one of the hostages. "I wish there'd been some other way out, but I figured that if the officers caught us all in the car they would shoot. It was either their life or ours.

"I shot Tindol, and J. E. Denton shot Traxler. Tindol died instantly. Traxler begged Denton not to shoot again."

Denton is an oil field worker vacationing in this area.

"Never Hurt Anybody."

"We never hurt anybody," Traxler mumbled as he tossed from the pain of his wound in a Hugo hospital. "All we wanted was to get away."

On a lonely country road 8 miles north of here the weary gunmen, who had subsisted mainly on whisky and narcotics in nearly two weeks of desperate hide-and-seek with Texas and Oklahoma officers, stopped their commandeered automobile.

"Traxler told Trimmer to pull up at the roadside," said Denton, "and we would wait until it got dark. When we stopped I looked at Tindol and he was looking out the window.

"His gun was right beside me and I grabbed it and shot him under the arm. Trimmer shot about the same time, but I couldn't tell where he was shooting. Then I turned and shot Traxler.

"Traxler said: 'What did you shoot me for?' Then he started cussing. He said: 'My brother will take care of you.'"

Trimmer's Account Similar.

Trimmer, a World War veteran, gave virtually the same version of the shooting.

"While I was driving the car, Tindol, who was in the back seat, kept a pistol at the back of my neck. He asked me several times how I would like to get a .45 slug in the neck," Trimmer said.

"Finally, Traxler, who was sitting beside me in the front seat, ordered me to pull up at the roadside. They were both worn out and could hardly keep awake.

"When I got the car parked I saw Traxler had dozed off. I glanced back at Denton and saw

Mysterious Plane Reported Headed East on Atlantic

New York, July 21 (AP).—A mysterious airplane flying east over the North Atlantic was reported by the master of a British freighter to the Radiomarine Corporation tonight.

The steamer, the 5,000-ton Ranee, was then 500 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland. If the pilot of the unidentified aircraft was some unknown undertaking an ocean flight to Europe he—or she—faced more than 1,500 miles of open water.

Surprised members of the freighter's crew reported hearing the roar of the plane's motor, or motors, as it passed swiftly overhead, andsaid they caught a brief view of its running lights, gleaming brightly against the sky.

Painters Take NonunionFight To LaborBoard

Holcombe Will Prefer Charges Against 2 Contractors Today.

Charges of violation of the Wagner act will be preferred to the regional offices of the National Labor Relations Board today by the Painters' Union in its fight to force all contractors on Government jobs to employ union labor.

Announcement that he would go to Baltimore to present his case against the firms of William Wilson & Co., of Atlanta, and Coons & Raptis, of Brooklyn, contractors on work at the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the City Postoffice, was made late yesterday by Bryce P. Holcombe, business manager of the Painters' Union here.

He made his decision, he said, after a conference behind closed doors with officials of the Labor Department and a representative of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, under which Government structures here as well as throughout the Nation are being erected and completed.

The conference was attended by Gerald Riley, acting solicitor of the Labor Department, Labor Conciliation Commissioner Howard Colvin, Neal Melich, supervising engineer of the Procurement Division, who was called as an "observer," and Holcombe.

Before Holcombe had announced he would file his formal complaints in Baltimore, more than 70 glaziers, all members of the glaziers union here, struck in sympathy with the painters.

Their action came after the painters union representatives had openly split with the Building Trades Commission, and refused to appear at a meeting of that group held yesterday morning.

The "war within a war," that of the painters and the Building Trades, was unofficial last night, but Holcombe said that a vote would be taken in several days, at which he was certain the 600 painters belonging to his group would vote, tem-

U. S. Wins Mellon Trust Go-Ahead

Philadelphia, July 21 (AP).—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today gave the government leave to proceed with its anti-trust suit in New York against the Aluminum Company of America and 43 individuals, including Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury.

The government charged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in a suit against the company filed in New York April 23. On May 14, Judge Robert M. Gibson, in the U. S. District Court at Pittsburgh, issued a temporary injunction restraining the government from proceeding against the company in New York.

Judiciary Committee to Meet Today; Garner Concedes Defeat.

Struggle Forecast On Recommitment

By Robert C. Albright.

The President's Supreme Court enlargement program was quietly interred yesterday and the Senate Judiciary Committee was called into extraordinary session this morning to write a suitable inscription.

By joint consent of Administration leaders and court plan opponents, the epitaph appeared likely to take the form of a "procedural" court reform bill, salvaging noncontroversial features of the President's two wrecked court bills.

But amid opposition jubilation over the quick turn in the fight, Senate opponents adopted a cautious approach. They still fear an adroit Administration maneuver to revive the garroted substitute bill.

A special meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee was called for this morning by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst to decide what may be done with a minimum of friction and a maximum of speed.

Garner, Barkley and Wheeler.

The meeting was scheduled at the mutual suggestion of Vice President John Nance Garner, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, liberal leader of the court plan opposition.

One salient fact emerged from a round of conferences at the White House and the Capitol—that the Administration's effort, to enlarge the Supreme Court or affect its present independent status will be abandoned this session.

The whip hand in the court fight definitely passed over to the opposition leadership yesterday on the heels of Tuesday's sudden decision of seven "noncommittal" Senators to vote for recommittal of the court plan.

Early yesterday, Vice President Garner virtually conceded this in a conference with Wheeler. He suggested the Montanan get together with his colleagues on a bill they would be willing to support. The opposition was given to understand it could practically "write its own ticket."

Luncheon at White House.

Barkley joined Garner in command of the scattered Administration court forces immediately after his marginal selection over Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, as majority leader of the Senate.

Barkley and Harrison discussed legislative strategy at a luncheon at the White House. The Kentuckian returned to the Capitol for conferences with Garner, Wheeler and Ashurst.

Then he received newsmen.

"At the suggestion of the Vice President, Senator Wheeler and myself," he announced, "Senator Ashurst has agreed to call a special meeting of the Judiciary Committee at 10:30 tomorrow morning to discuss informally the situation in regard to the judiciary bill."

Meanwhile, Wheeler had called in 16 members of the opposition group to talk over procedure. For two hours in his smoke-filled office they discussed opposition alternatives to the Administration's court program.

One major point of controversy remained to be ironed out before the Senate can proceed toward enactment of a modified program affecting lower-court procedure.

The Administration still opposed return of the substitute court bill to the Judiciary Committee through

New Black Legion Killing Revealed

Detroit, July 21 (AP).—Another Black Legion killing was disclosed today as Dayton Dean, executioner for the hooded night riders, started to prison to serve a life term for murder.

Two city detectives, Lieut. Jack Harvill and Sergt. Charles Meehan revealed that Dean confessed last October to the hanging of a man in a grove on the eastern edge of Detroit four years ago.

They said Dean told them the killing took place at a Black Legion meeting attended by 1,000 persons soon after he joined the order.

ReichImpartial Over Far East, Hull Is Assured

Secretary of State Sees Dieckhoff; Also Saito and Wang.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday conferred again with the ambassadors of Japan and China on the critical controversy between those powers and later received the German Ambassador, who is understood to have voiced his government's approval of efforts made by the United States to preserve peace in the Far East.

Dr. Hans Dieckhoff discussed with the Secretary and Undersecretary Welles international phases of the crisis. While neither he nor the American officials would comment on their discussions, it was reported that Germany was prepared to pursue a policy of strict impartiality and support efforts to prevent hostilities.

With Ambassadors Hirosi Saito of Japan and Dr. C. T. Wang of China, the Secretary of State went over latest news from the scene of the threatened conflict and continued this Government's careful efforts to avert armed conflict between the two powers.

Peiping Incident "Regretted."

At the same time, there were increasing indications that the incident in which two American women, Miss Carol Lathrop, of Washington, and Mrs. Helen R. Jones, of Detroit, were reported to have been violently handled by Japanese sentries at Peiping, would be settled peaceably.

Japanese military officials at Peiping were reported to have expressed regret over the incident to the commander of the American Embassy guard, though an Associated Press dispatch from Peiping said Japanese officials denied the sentries used violence.

The Japanese version was that the American women crossed a street and attempted to look inside a sandbag barricade and that Japanese sentries "requested them to desist." They said the women were not kicked as reported but were "merely pushed on their way" in order to "protect Japanese military secrets." They said one woman slipped on the wet pavement.

Denies Looking Inside.

Mrs. Jones was quoted by the Associated Press as having replied that "if being kicked and shoved as we were isn't violence, then I'd hate to meet the real article."

She said it was her impression that the pavement was dry.

"We had dined on the hotel roof and were walking because of the fine evening," she said. "Undoubtedly we went too close to the barricades, although I am unable to recall we had any idea of looking inside.

"The minute we saw the sentries rise up and heard their war whoop, we were terrified and thought only of getting away quickly. A wave of the hand would have sent us on our way only too gladly.

"I wish the whole thing would blow over and be forgotten."

By Franklyn Waltman

In politics it frequently happens that defeat is a blessing in disguise and that victory is so costly as to become an evil which harasses and plagues the victor for months and years to come. Such an observation is particularly applicable to the rapidly moving developments on Capitol Hill yesterday.

WALTMAN.

The Administration finally conceded defeat in the President's five-month fight to reorganize the Supreme Court. This measure has been doomed since May, but the President insisted that the fight go on. Finally he increased the ignominy of his defeat by writing the strange "dear Alben" letter to Senator Barkley last week.

The President's defeat on this issue is perhaps one of the most amazing developments in American history. Within eight months after achieving the greatest victory at the polls that ever has come to any American, with Democrats holding 76 out of 96 of the Senate seats, the President is crushingly defeated over the question which he made an issue for party loyalty and solidarity.

What is the more amazing is that a President possessing the political genius and intuition that Mr. Roosevelt has shown should have so badly misjudged the public opinion of the country that even his closest friends were forced to take a stand against him, and should make as many blunders as occurred in this fight.

How deep the wounds of this battle have gone—how irreparable the cleavage in the Democratic Party—only time will reveal. But it is entirely possible—even probable—that the defeat which the President has suffered will become the means of reconciling the warring Democratic faction behind him.

Without doubt there are men in the Democratic Party who never again will feel toward President Roosevelt as they did before he precipitated this historic controversy. Without doubt there are members of the Senate who never can be won back to unquestioned allegiance to the head of the Democratic Party.

But, on the other hand, there are Democrats who were adamant against the Supreme Court scheme, only too willing to follow the President in fighting for his social and economic objectives and thus prove their loyalty to him. By next January, provided the President is willing to forget about the Supreme Court plan, much of the bitterness of the fight now ending will be forgotten.

All of this, however, is tempered by the fact that the President yesterday won a victory on Capitol Hill—a victory which may prove more costly than defeat. He demonstrated in the election of Senator Barkley as floor leader that he still controlled the Democrats of the Senate by a margin of one vote.

Had Senator Pat Harrison won the leadership fight, his victory undoubtedly would have been heralded as another Roosevelt defeat. But that would have been forgotten in a day or two—and Harrison as the floor leader of necessity would have had to fight the President's battles and to seek to bring about harmony within the party. A Harrison victory would have done much to assuage the bitterness of some of the Democrats now opposing the White House.

What will not be forgotten in a day or two—what may rankle for the next three years—is the fact that the President turned his back on Senator Harrison, on Senator James F. Byrnes and other Senate Democratic conservatives. Senator Harrison and his friends are well aware of the fact that the White House intervened in the fight and that had the President not done so, the Mississippian would have won without trouble.

It was clear to anyone with experience on Capitol Hill that the President was showing a preference to Senator Barkley in the "dear Alben" letter. And Mr. Roosevelt was not zealous to destroy that impression altogether. He was given a chance at his press conference Tuesday to do so and he let the opportunity go. At least one Senator who had pledged himself to Harrison asked to be released from the promise because he said he desired to obey the White House command as indicated in the "dear Alben" letter.

Despite the White House support of Senator Barkley, victory rested on Senator Harrison as late as Tuesday night. He lost, however, when Senator William H. Dietrich, who previously had committed himself to the Harrison cause, asked yesterday morning to be released on the ground that the Illinois Democratic organization was bringing intense pressure on him to vote for Senator Barkley. What does the Illinois Democratic machine care about the Senate leadership, unless importuned by Washington to intervene?

All these things are known to Senator Harrison and his friends. Now, at last, they know the White House attitude toward them. And human nature being what it is, does anyone really believe that they do not resent it and that in time they will seek sweet revenge? And let it be remembered that Senator Harrison remains an unfettered man, with 36 friends sufficiently loyal to him to defy the White House.

Protocol Division Split to Be Made

Another step, in the reorganization and redistricting of work in the State Department, it was learned yesterday, is to result in splitting the Division of Protocol and Conferences into two divisions, one to have charge of protocol matters, the other to deal with international conferences.

George T. Summerlin, Minister to Panama, who was among the day's callers at the White House, is to be named chief of the Protocol Division, it was said, while Richard Southgate, chief of the present division, will head that concerned with international meetings.

'Forgotten Woman' Freed From Prison

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Mrs. Daisy Tegtmeyer, the "forgotten woman" of the Cook County jail, was free tonight for the first time in three and one-half years.

The 52-year-old widow walked defiantly out of jail an hour after the appellate court approved a $7,000 bond on a writ of supersedeas. Mrs. Tegtmeyer had been a prisoner since January 5, 1934, when Circuit Judge Friend ruled her in contempt for refusing to explain what became of $30,000 of her father-in-law's estate, which was in her care. Heirs demanded an accounting.

Twenty-four times, with the aid of a dozen lawyers, Mrs. Tegtmeyer sought her freedom. In each instance the presiding judge ruled against her when she adamantly refused to account for the $30,000

President's Use Of Tax 'Dodge' Held Admitted

Roosevelt Confessed Legal Loophole 3 Years Ago, Fish Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 21.—Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, tonight declared President Roosevelt was quoted in a published interview three years ago as having "admitted" making use of legal loopholes in the income tax law and said:

"Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones."

In a speech at the annual dinner of the Dutchess County Republican committee, Fish said in his prepared speech:

"I do not charge the President with violating the law, but when he admitted taking advantage of legal income tax loopholes it seems strangely inconsistent for him to use harsh words and to denounce other Americans for doing the same thing, charging them with being immoral, indecent and unethical."

Quotes Interview.

Fish added that as far as he knew the President never had denied the interview, which he said was published on February 14, 1934, in the Chicago Tribune. He quoted from it as follows:

"'President Roosevelt today admitted that he has been one of thousands of American citiezns to duck through some legal loophole in the income tax. In response to questions at his press conference the President related how an old barn built in 1790 and standing on his Hyde Park, N. Y., estate opened up for him a legal loophole in the income tax provisions on depreciation deductions."

Fish said that when he appeared before the Congressional Committee on tax evasions recently it was "on the explicit condition that I would not refer to the President."

Charges "Fascism."

"This drastic reservation smacked more of Fascism than our American policy of freedom of speech," he added.

At another point, he said:

"Mr. Roosevelt about 1910 bought a farm adjacent to his Hyde Park home. On the farm were a house, some sheds and a barn. An insurance appraiser valued the barn at $4,000, and when it burned down Mr. Roosevelt collected that amount. Yet the President said 'the barn was worthless and after it burned down the farm was just as good.' Recalling an ancient ditty, evidently the old red barn ain't what it used to be."

Jefferson Shrine Report Due to Go To House Today

Nearly three months in the drafting, a report is expected to be submitted to the House today explaining why that body should pass the bill which bars location of the proposed Thomas Jefferson Memorial at the Tidal Basin.

Chairman Kent E. Keller of the House Library Committee yesterday asserted he hopes to have the report completed in time for presentation today.

The lengthy document, it is believed, will review the entire controversy and criticize selection of the basin site by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission on the grounds of cost, proximity to other monuments and office buildings, interference with the basin's function as a flushing agent for Washington Channel and elimination of the Japanese Cherry Trees.

Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, introduced the bill last April and public hearings were concluded nearly three months ago.

Employes of Retired Merchants Doing Local Business Placed Under Wages and Hours Bill.

EMPLOYES WHO WORK for retail merchants doing business of a local nature were placed under provisions of the Black-Connery wages and hours bill yesterday by vote of the House Labor Committee.

The vote came on an amendment offered by Representative Thomas (Democrat), of Texas. Thomas' amendment struck out a provision which had been proposed by the Senate Labor Committee to exempt such employes.

In view of the vote, it is not anticipated there will be an effort in the House committee to write into the bill a provision exempting firms employing fewer than eight persons. Such a provision had been discussed by committee members.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, who opposes the provision adopted today, said "there still is a legal question" whether the wage and hour board proposed in the bill could bring such workers under the act, and predicted the issue would ultimately be fought in the courts.

Tentative exemption of workers covered by the motor carriers act also was voted, insofar as hour provisions are concerned, but they were left subject to its wage clauses.

WESTERN SUGAR champions predicted early consideration of pending legislation extending quota provisions of the expiring Jones-Costigan act and restoring benefit payments to producers.

They said they were confident the legislation would win House, Senate and, finally, Presidential approval, despite Administration objections to off-shore features of the proposal.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), Colorado, said he had received assurances from new Majority Floor Leader Barkley, of Kentucky that the sugar legislation would receive sympathetic consideration in the Senate.

Representatives Clark (Democrat), Idaho, and Greever (Democrat), Wyoming, after conferences with House Rules Committee Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), New York, and Speaker Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, announced they felt confident the legislation would receive early House action.

The Department of Agriculture has assigned 20 additional Federal inspectors to Florida and Alabama in the war on the Argentine weevil, a pest which attacks numerous crops, Representative Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, said . . . REPRESENTATIVE RANDOLPH (Democrat), West Virginia, said last night it is up to science to "find the next new industry" which will carry the country along the road of industrial progress.

"When found," he said in a radio address, "it will supply more employment, stimulate increased business and produce a greater national income. Such inventions are the cornerstone of prosperity and science is the tool we must use to unearth them and shape them into useful products."

Randolph has introduced a bill along the lines of President Roosevelt's recent technological report to Washington. The West Virginian's measure would provide for a continuous study of scientific and social aspects of technological developments.

A "WELL FINANCED" campaign is being waged in his State for a Senatorial candidate to oppose him next year, Senator Black, of Alabama, said. He made the statement in a letter replying to a resolution in which directors of the Montgomery County, Ala., Farm Bureau opposed the wage-hour bill.

Black declared the bill was part of a Democratic program which would react to the benefit of farmers as well as of labor.

He said interests opposing the Administration's power program wanted to replace him with a Senator who will fight its continuation.

"All Alabamians know that my unswerving loyalty to this power program is largely responsible for the campaign of vilification and misrepresentation now being made against me in Alabama," he said.

The bureau directors had denounced the labor bill on the ground it would raise farmers' living costs and would discourage labor from remaining on the farm.

Black declared he did not forget the farmers of his State when he urged upon Congress the enactment of wage and hour legislation. He has given notice, he said, that if the agriculture committee does not hold hearings on the farm bill he will offer a resolution instructing it to do so.

The Senator said he could not believe Alabama farmers wanted him to repudiate a President whose program has raised cotton prices from 5 cents to 12 cents a pound, and whose program has doubled farm income.

Republic Firm Caused Riot, Police Assert

'Pressure' Prevented Halting of Bloodshed, Massillon Chief Testifies.

By William V. Nessly.

The steel strike riot at Massillon, Ohio, on July 11, in which two persons were killed, could have been prevented had it not been for continuous pressure by the Republic Steel Corporation and the Massillon Law and Order League for appointment of special police, Stanley W. Switter, Massillon chief of police said yesterday.

The chief, first witness at the National Labor Relations Board hearing on charges that Republic Steel has violated the Wagner labor relations act, said the riot occurred while he was out of town for "lunch and a few beers," the first rest he had had in many days in the strike-troubled city. When he returned to Massillon at 1 a. m., on the morning of Monday, July 12, he found clash had occurred between police and pickets, and 150 to 160 men had been arrested and were overflowing his police station.

Charges a Republic official had commended the manner in which Chicago police handled the steel strike situation there, where ten strike sympathizers were killed, also were made by the police chief and Richard B. Hartman, Massillon city attorney. Carl Meyers, district manager for the steel company, the witnesses said asked why their officers didn't do like the Chicago police.

"They know how to handle the situation," Meyers was quoted by Switter as saying.

"Could Have Handled Situation."

"I could have handled the situation without bloodshed, if it hadn't been for pressure from Republic officials and others," Switter declared.

Meyers warned Massillon officials, it was testified, that unless the mills were reopened the city would be like a prairie and would have no need for a mayor, police chief or city attorney.

Switter had a force of 13 men, divided into three shifts, he said. The Law and Order League offered to raise $8,300 with which to hire special police, but only a few hundred dollars ever was subscribed, he told the board. He said he agreed to accept the money, but would not send the men to the picket lines.

Throughout the pressure for extra police, he contended, he held out for employment of neutral men if any were named, and finally did agree to the use of ten. Appointment of Republic employes on the special force was suggested by Gen. William Marlin, commander of the Ohio National Guard in the strike area, and by the Law and Order League, he testified.

Tells of "Threat."

On July 7 a delegation from the Law and Order League threatened to impeach the mayor and have the chief removed, the board was told, and on the same day Gen. Marlin called on Switter to find out "what we were backing down for, and why we hadn't shown some signs of life in taking on these men," referring to Republic employes. To his insistence that neutral men be employed, he said Gen. Marlin replied there was no time to go looking for neutral men.

Capt. Harry Curley, a World War veteran, had offered to "round up" steel employes to serve and two Republic officials prepared lists of men available. In view of the "pressure," Switter said, he consented to about 30 or 40 of the 60 or 70 men who were sent to him being sworn in.

On the following Sunday, he went out into the country for a brief rest, he said, and when he returned the fatal fight had occurred. Curley had suggested that he take a few hours off, he said, and in his absence had increased the police detail near the picket lines from 6 men to 20.

Switter Cross-Examined.

Switter, husky, imperturbable former steel worker before becoming police chief, was closely cross-examined by Luther Day, counsel for Republic, but met every question with a studied answer.

Questioned as to a request from the plant that food be permitted to go through the picket lines to some 20 men still in the plants, he said he took it up with C. I. O. leaders, conducting the strike.

"I wasn't taking food to nobody," he said. "I wasn't starting no trouble there."

When a member of the board asked whether he took that attitude to preserve the "status quo" in the strike, he replied affirmatively.

"Were you willing to have men starve in there in order to preserve the status quo?" Day fired at him.

"They didn't have to stay in there and starve," the chief replied.

Halted Work Meeting.

He admitted he had caused leaders of a "back-to-work" movement to call off a scheduled mass meeting because he feared bloodshed, though he permitted the C. I. O. forces to hold two meetings.

"You feared," Day said, "that the C. I. O. men would come to the meeting and start a fight, didn't you?"

Quickly a board member asked: "Did you fear the back-to-work people would go to the C. I. O. meeting?"

To which Switter replied:

"The troops were there then. I didn't care."

Charges of interference with the mails, on which several strikers are now under indictment, were brought into the testimony. Switter said the postmaster told him of the "interference." He testified pickets had told him mails were stopped because food was being sent into the plant for men still inside.

Day brought out by his cross-examination of Switter that many clubs of various sizes and types had been taken from arrested strikers, that Switter had seen many clubs and stones along the picket lines, that pickets had beaten "two or three" men, that leaders of the Law and Order League were citizens and business men and not connected with the steel company and that apparently a considerable number of employes wanted to get back to work.

On the other hand, Lawrence Hart, attorney for the board, developed that no guns had been taken from the 150 to 160 strikers and strike sympathizers arrested after the fighting on July 11, that Republic had given the police force a supply of sawed-off shotguns, gas guns and ammunition, and that the special police sworn in from the ranks of company employes had only temporary leaves of absence from the company.

Hartman Testimony Similar.

Hartman, city solicitor, gave testimony much along the lines of Switter's. He said Meyers, Republic district manager, "pointed out what a fine job the city police of Chicago had done" in the strike there. He said a delegation from the Trades Labor Council of Massillon, American Federation of Labor members, had protested against putting on additional police, insisting there had been no breakdown of law and order.

The hearing will be resumed today with Hartman still testifying. It is expected the sessions will be protracted and that most of them will be held in Cleveland.

Lee Pressman, counsel for the C. I. O., took part in yesterday's session with Charles Fahy, chief counsel, and Hart for the board, while Republic was represented by Day, T. F. Patton and T. F. Veach.

Numerous witnesses and spectators from Massillon are attending the hearings, and yesterday's meeting of the United Mine Workers international board was called off so the members could listen to the testimony.

Fearful lest their captors use them as shields in a gun battle with police, J. E. Denton and Frank Trimmer, nervy Oklahomans, snatched the guns of Fred Tindol, Texas fugitive, and "Pete" Traxler, Southwestern gunman, and shot them down. Tindol was slain and Traxler critically wounded. Denton (upper left), shows how he grabbed the dozing Tindol's revolver. "I killed him," Denton says (right). "I'm too tough to kill," snarling Traxler (bottom), says as a surgeon administers a blood transfusion.

Death; 99 Years; Sentences of 2 in Scottsboro Case

Decatur, Ala., July 21 (AP).—Imprisonment for 99 years was decreed today for Andy Wright by the tenth jury in six years to return a guilty verdict in the "Scottsboro case" on charges that nine colored men assaulted two white women.

Shortly after the Wright jury reported, Clarence Norris, convicted last week, was sentenced to die September 24.

As Judge W. W. Callahan looked down on Norris, the colored man said:

"The jury didn't find me guilty—they just thought they did. I was convicted of a crime I never thought of committing."

The defense filed notice of appeal, staying execution.

Hostages Kill Texas Fugitive, Wound Other

Tindol was asleep too. Both of us grabbed for their guns. Both of us shot Tindol at the same time. Then Denton shot Traxler.

Begs for Doctor.

"Traxler begged us to get him to a doctor. He said he was afraid he might bleed to death. After awhile he started threatening us. He said he knew he was going to die."

At the Hugo Hospital, however, Dr. Joe Devine said Traxler was resting well and the desperado was given a good chance to recover.

County Attorney Ben Carter, Durant, said he would file charges of armed robbery or kidnaping against Traxler, probably tomorrow. The former charge carried a maximum penalty of death. The death penalty provided in the State kidnaping law would not apply in Traxler's case, Carter said.

Only a small amount of money was found on Traxler. His tan shirt had one hole in the back and there were powder burns, showing he had been shot at close range.

"They ordered me out of the car," Traxler said. "Then they plugged me while my back was turned.

"They dragged me off beside the road and waited for somebody to come along. I begged them to get me to a hospital before I bled to death. Finally some Negroes came along and they took us in on a truck."

Traxler puffed nervously at a cigarette and said:

"Tell my wife I'll pull out all right."

Mrs. Nell Tingley Traxler, for whose sake Traxler appeared recklessly in Verden, Okla., yesterday, driving her away as townspeople looked on aghast, was in the county jail at Durant. She was captured late yesterday near Durant when possemen trapped the fugitives at the dead end of a country lane and opened fire.

Mrs. Traxler fainted and Traxler and Tindol fled into the brush before a hail of bullets.

Without success, officers questioned Traxler concerning whereabouts of Charles Chapman, Arkansas bank robber, third fugitive from Eastham, Tex., prison farm. He was with Traxler and Tindol last week when they abducted Baird H. Markham, jr., son of a wealthy New York oil man, near Ada.

Markham later was released unharmed.

Traxler and Tindol, fleeing from officers after the capture of Mrs. Traxler, eluded bloodhounds from McAlester Penitentiary.

"We kept going through the river bottoms all night," Traxler said. "Everywhere we went we could hear the dogs. Once we almost ran into some officers."

Traxler and Tindol went to Denton's home and forced him at pistol point to accompany them. Almost out of gasoline, they abandoned Denton's car. Still holding him hostage, they broke into Trimmer's home.

Drove with Gun at Back.

Until the tables unexpectedly turned, Trimmer drove his own automobile with a gun at his back.

"They blamed me for a lot of things I didn't do," Traxler said. "Even on this last trip we never hurt anybody. All we wanted was to get away some place."

On July 9 Traxler, Tindol and Chapman, with six other convicts, broke from the Eastham, Tex., prison camp. One convict was slain and a guard wounded.

Traxler and his two companions abducted a Texas rancher, stole two automobiles and then fled into Oklahoma.

For 12 days the trio spread terror over Oklahoma. Federal Bureau of Investigation and State crime bureau agents and officers of the State highway patrol joined in a widespread hunt.

Before dawn yesterday Traxler and Tindol appeared boldly in Verdon, Okla., picked up Mrs. Traxler and sped away.

They dashed across the border to Sherman, Tex., were fired upon by officers and fled back into Oklahoma.

Traxler, twice captured at Pauls Valley and held for the slaying of a Pauls Valley officer, escaped both times.

He played another game of hide-and seek with possemen until he was seriously wounded and recaptured near Canadian, Tex., by Panhandle farmers.

Brought back to Oklahoma and placed in McAlester Penitentiary, Traxler recovered. He was extradited to Texas and sentenced to 99 years for the robbery of a store at Lipscomb, Tex.

Tindol, 27, was serving 35 years from Jasper County, Tex., for robbery.

Child Marriage Voided.

Los Angeles, July 21 (AP).—Superior Judge Frank Swain annulled the marriage of 12-year-old Virginia Shirley and Harold Toy, 21, today. They eloped to Yuma, Ariz., last April. The child said she married without consent of her parents or a State court.

Editors Defer Vote Upon 'Closed Shop'

Detroit, July 21 (AP).—The National Editorial Association today heard William J. Cameron, of the Ford Motor Co., appeal for a better "understanding" of labor problems, and deferred action on a committee recommendation that it join other newspaper associations in fighting the "closed shop" in news departments.

Cameron said that "newspapers at their best and industry at its best have much in common," but he added that "without real understanding of the origins and motives of the present labor difficulties, the wrong emphasis has been expressed by papers to the detriment of real public understanding."

Only one 12-word paragraph in the convention steering committee's report of recommendations referred to the closed editorial shop. It said "that the N. E. A. should accept the invitation to join the newspaper committee." The newspaper committee was formed at a meeting of newspaper association representatives in Chicago three weeks ago to combat closed-shop contracts demanded by the American Newspaper Guild.

Dislodged Wheel Held Coaster Crash Cause

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—A defective safety wheel was blamed today for a collision of two roller coaster trains at Riverview Amusement Park in which 24 persons were injured. Two victims remained in a hospital.

The trains bumped last night when one failed to make the last peak in the ride, then swung and rolled back and forth in the depression between two "humps" while the following train bore down on it. Frank Gaynor, chief elevator inspector, said he found that a safety wheel dislodged and scraped on the tracks, slowing the coaster enough to prevent it making the "bump."

Hibernians Caution U. S.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 21 (AP).—The Ancient Order of Hibernians adopted at its national convention today resolutions urging the United States to keep out of foreign entanglements, and protesting a British plan to partition Palestine. The convention condemned communism as "a destroyer of liberty and enemy of religious freedom."

British Labor Fights Division Of Holy Land

Proposal Meets Stormy Opposition in Debate in Commons.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 21.—Stormy opposition from the labor party greeted the request of Colonial Secretary William G. A. Ormsby-Gore today that the House of Commons accept the British plan to partition Palestine.

Declaring the League of Nations mandate under which Britain has tried for years to obtain peaceable relations between Jews and Arabs was "no longer workable," Ormsby-Gore said partition is the only solution recognizing "interests of Moslem, Jew and Christian."

The plan would divide Palestine into three parts—giving Arabs and Jews separate States and putting the third part under British mandate.

Further Study Asked.

Before packed galleries, the labor party exerted all its force to sidetrack the plan. Morgan Jones introduced a labor resolution asking that a new committee be named to study the partitioning scheme further.

Jones called the plan a matter of sabotage, while Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal leader, said the Royal commission's report proposing partition filled him with a "sense of humiliation, for it made it clear that since 1929 the record of British administration in Palestine has been one of puerile resolutions."

Sir Archibald declared the plan would mean "sitting on the safety valve of the Jewish problem in Europe."

"Poland is looking to emigration to Palestine as an alternative open to the Jews and, if we closed that outlet to them, it would be bound to make their position far worse and far more dangerous," he said.

Strabolgi Attacks Plan.

Ormsby-Gore said that only by division can the nationalistic ideals of both Jews and Arabs be realized.

In the House of Lords, Lord Strabolgi alleged that Premier Mussolini had already contacted the Zionists for Italy's gain.

"This is the finest thing to further the interests of the leader of the Italian nation that could have ever been proposed," he said.

"His minions already are in touch with the Zionists, promising them all kinds of things, and I wouldn't be surprised to find he is in touch with the Arabs, promising them all kinds of things as well."

He added that from the British military point of view, the partition scheme was indefensible.

The House of Lords concluded its debate without a vote.

Milan, Ga., Loses Its Loafers; It's a Busy Village Now

Milan, Ga., July 21 (AP).—Mayor D. R. Newton viewed with satisfaction today the results of his drive to rid this south Georgia town of the "loafers" among its 800 residents.

The main street was busier, there were fewer whittlers sitting in front of stores, swapping yarns.

Two days ago Mayor Newton tacked up an ultimatum for "loafers" to go work or move on. He named the "loafers" he was talking about.

"I believe Milan has more loafers in it than any town of its size in the world," he explained.

Denied 90 Billions By U.S., Wanderer Sent to Hospital

Harry B. Bender, 62-year-old itinerant farm hand, was unsuccessful in an attempt to collect $90,000,000,000 from the Treasury Department yesterday.

Bender came here from Pittsburgh Tuesday night carrying a satchel containing an auditor's book and stacks of paper which he said were promissory notes. The book listed his debtors and the amounts they owed him. None owed him less than $4,000,000. Principal debtor was the United States Government.

Through an intricate system of finance, based on the fluctuating value of the dollar, Bender had calculated his promissory notes were worth a total of $90,000,000,000.

Alarmed Treasury officials sent Bender to L. P. Sturm, District sanitary officer, who had the man taken to Gallinger Hospital for observation. Sturm reported Bender offered him $1,000,000 for his aid in collecting the total sum.

Yorktown Exceeds SpeedRequirement In Test Off Maine

Newport News, Va., July 21.—The Navy's newest defense weapon, the aircraft carrier Yorktown, docked at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. at 7 a. m. today upon returning from standardization trials off the Maine Coast.

The 20,000-ton vessel had been away ten days.

Shipyard officials reported the trials were entirely satisfactory, the Yorktown having "met all tests" and "exceeded speed requirements."

The Navy Department trial board, headed by Rear Admiral H. L. Brinser, returned with the ship and left for Washington after she docked.

The Yorktown will be tied up at the shipyard until she is delivered. The delivery date is not definite.

Summer Camp Fund Swelled By New Gifts

$160 Added to Tuberculosis Association's Funds for Poor Children

Contributions to the health fund of the District Tuberculosis Association yesterday were swelled by $160, bringing the total for this season to $2,206.

Eighty-four children are at the health camp on Bald Eagle as a result of the campaign, and now three others can enter. Mrs. Ernest T. Grant, managing director of the association, said that the camp will run for seven more weeks and that $70 will finance the stay of some tubercular child for that period.

In the first nutrition class held at the camp this summer it was learned that the camp children had gained 107½ pounds in weight since they entered the home July 7. Of this, 102 pounds were gained by the 74 children who had been in camp longest.

Seven-year-old James Pettit led the other children in amount of weight gained, being four pounds heavier than he had been two weeks before.

At the camp the gain in weight is not considered as "putting on pounds," but as storing up energy which will aid the children in their fight against tuberculosis.

Toys for the children were distributed at camp yesterday by Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. C. D. Lowe, chairman of the congress toy fund. Dolls, marbles, crayons, scissors, balls, shovels, blocks and airplanes were in the collection. The District P.-T. A. already had given $340 to the camp fund.

Mrs. Margaret Craig Marsh, superintendent of the camp, announced that she would be grateful for old magazines from which the children could cut out pictures. All magazine donations should be left at association headquarters at 1022 Eleventh street northwest.

Enemy Nears Camp Ritchie In War Games

Maryland 58th Brigade Practices Maneuvering as a Unit.

By Phillip Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 21.—Battle problems were the order of the day today as Maryland's Fifty-eighth Brigade settled down to the serious business of soldiering as an integrated unit.

Each of the six regiments of the brigade was given a separate problem to work out as a preliminary to the brigade problem, which starts tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Col. Frank Hancock, commanding Fifth Regiment, and Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, commanding the First, were notified tonight that a large force of the enemy was approaching. At 10 a. m. tomorrow they will receive orders to march and the place of bivouac. The troops will move out of camp at 2 p. m.

Arriving at their bivouac they will receive further orders from Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, commanding the brigade, as the problem develops. The troops will camp out over night and are expected to contact the enemy at daybreak tomorrow.

The battalions were moved into their positions this morning by the trucks of the service company, Silver Spring.

Officers of the brigade were guests of Capt. Edgar Fell, Swedish consul at Baltimore, in accordance with an ancient custom this afternoon.

Capt. Fell, a United States special assistant attorney general, explained that the Constitution forbids an officer of the United States to accept any office or emolument from a foreign nation but that it does not bar an official of another nation from being appointed an official of the United States. He was appointed consul before he was given his American post.

The consul's party is an annual event with the Fifth Regiment. All officers in camp with the Fifth are invited to attend.

Star Advances McKelway to Succeed Kuhn

McKelway, a Star reporter, editor and editorial writer during the last 17 years, succeeds Oliver Owen Kuhn, who died Sunday.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Newbold Noyes, associate editor of the Star, at the direction of the editor, Theodore W. Noyes.

McKelway was assistant and acting managing editor at the time of his promotion. He had been assistant city editor, city editor, news manager and editorial writer.

Beginning newspaper work on the Washington Times in 1916, he served in 1919-20 as news editor and editorial writer on the New Britain, (Conn.) Herald. He was first lieutenant and aide de camp to Brig. Gen. L. M. Brett during the World War, and served in the battles of St. Mihiel and the Argonne.

McKelway was born in Fayetteville, N. C., October 2, 1895. He came to Washington in 1908 and was educated at Western High School, V. P. I. and George Washington University. He lives at 2071 Park road northwest and is married and has three sons.

Mitchell Hanson Dies at His Home

New Wrinkle in War: 5-Man Fighting Plane

Official Photograph, U. S. Air Corps, from the Associated Press.

This artist's drawing shows the new all-metal, five-man fighting plane built at Buffalo, N. Y., for the U. S. Army. After undergoing preliminary tests, it will be sent to Dayton, Ohio, and Langley Field, Va. Army men said the plane is a radical change from present fighting craft and that it could "overhaul anything in the air." It carries six machine guns and small bombs.

Painters Take Nonunion Fight To Labor Board

Holcombe Will Prefer Charges Against 2 Contractors Today.

porarily, at least, for severance from the trades group.

As Holcombe returned from his conference at the Labor Department yesterday with the Government officials, he was greeted by hundreds of painters at the union's headquarters, in the 700 block of Sixth street northwest.

Here they held their second meeting of the day, returning from their picket lines around the two projects, as well as the Apex Building, the Archives Building, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, the Government Printing Office Warehouse and the Procurement Division itself.

It was estimated that more than 450 painters were in the picket lines yesterday.

"We do not wish to inconvenience contractors who live up to their union agreements," said Holcombe. "That is furtherest from our thoughts. We do not wish to affect private jobs and private contractors. We are fighting for a principle, however."

Holcombe praised the police department for its strict observance of the right to picket, and again promised that all picketing would be orderly and well within the law.

At the closed conference Holcombe charged that the two firms were in violation of the Wagner act.

Riley Suggests Appeal.

Riley, it was understood, suggested the appeal to the Labor Relations Board, and the question was raised as to whether the Davis-Bacon act regarding a prevailing wage scale was being violated on at least one of the projects.

The representative of the Procurement Division said that Treasury agents would investigate these angles of the strike.

Holcombe meanwhile announced that he would not fly to Lafayette, Ind., to confer with L. P. Lindolof, president of the National Painters Union, until he knew exactly how things were going to develop here. In event of some satisfactory settlement he contemplates an effort to bring all union painters on Government projects out on a countrywide sympathy strike.

The breakup of the painters and the Building Trades Council, although unofficial, brought the threat of interunion war. It was brought about because of the painters' union's attitude, according to John Locher, chairman of the council.

"We are in sympathy with the painters in their demands," asserted Locher last night. "But we are standing pat and not going out on any sympathy strike at this time. There will be no special meeting about it. We want the painters to get what they are after."

He added, however, that he believed the picket lines of the painters would be ignored by other construction workers.

It was this action of ignoring the picket lines that contributed to the decision of the painters' union yesterday morning to withhold representation from the meeting of the executive board of the council.

Peace yesterday temporarily reigned in connection with District projects as workers returned to jobs on the Eastern and Alice Deal schools.

Issues involved in the tieups at the Young, Paul and Grimke schools were being submitted to the Labor Department.

On yet another skirmish line of the Washington strike front negotiations between Laundry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers Union Local 187 and three wholesale plant owners was to start today, according to Calvin Cousen, president of the union, under terms of consent elections held Monday by the National Labor Relations Board.

States Vie on Liquor Laws.

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 21 (AP).—Liquor legislation among the States was likened to "the competitive world rearmament program" by E. S. Kelty of the Distilled Spirits Institute, speaking at the national conference of State liquor administrators today.

Flame Swallower Faces Poison Death

Cleveland, July 21 (AP).—A lifetime of flame-swallowing carried frail 61-year-old Dan Nagyfy to the threshold of death tonight. Suffering from toxic poisoning in a hospital in a "critical condition," he was given only a "remote chance of recovery" by his physician.

Clad in the costume of Mephistopheles at the Great Lakes Exposition, Nagyfy "swallowed" red-hot coals, lighted cigarettes and cigars from them with an easy nonchalance.

Officers declared the insurgents achieved only limited success.

Dispatches from Barcelona reported two women and an army corporal were killed in an insurgent air raid on a train near Matara en route to Barcelona.

The reports also stated Catalonian airplane production had been speeded up, with factories now turning out three planes daily for the government army.

Parade Protests Duce's Troops.

More than 200 members of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy yesterday marched in front of the Italian Embassy carrying placards and banners demanding withdrawal of Italian troops from Spain.

Following the refusal of Fulvio Suvich, Italian Ambassador, to receive a delegation of five of the members, the group assembled on a vacant lot opposite the embassy on Sixteenth street and heard Morris Wilson, liberal leader, read a statement charging that ". . . the rebellion of the Fascist forces would have been crushed long ago by the Spanish republic had it not been for your aid (Italy) and that of Germany."

Neutrality Deadlock Holds.

London, July 21 (AP).—British hopes of reviving nonintervention negotiations speedily to isolate the Spanish civil war dimmed tonight as the provisional deadline set by Lord Plymouth for another subcommittee session drew near.

Efforts to break the Anglo-Italian disagreement over discussing belligerent rights for the combatants, which broke up yesterday's session, bore no apparent fruit.

When the subcommittee meeting ended, Lord Plymouth declared he hoped to call a new meeting within 48 hours to attempt to break the deadlock.

Hitler Offers Russian Envoy 'Olive Branch'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 21.—Adolf Hitler gave diplomats something to think about when he received the new Soviet ambassador at his Berchtesgaden villa and, in the course of the exchange of greetings, used the word "nonintervention."

He observed that the creation of normal relations between Germany and Russia would correspond not only to the interests of both countries, but also to the requirements of nonintervention, "today more pressing than ever." And he said Germany would aid co-operative efforts.

In some quarters that was interpreted as an important peace gesture toward a nation for which Hitler often has expressed a pronounced dislike nad which has been in frequent disagreement with the Reich in sessions of the international committee for nonintervention in Spain.

Both Germans and Russians have been fighting in the Spanish civil war, and war materials made in both nations have been reported in use.

Germany recognizes the insurgent Spanish administration; the U. S. S. R. favors the Valencia government.

Said one diplomat, commenting on Hitler's remark:

"That's not only an olive branch; it's an olive branch with a dove sitting on it."

The fact that Der Fuehrer received the ambassador, Dr. Constantine Youreneff, so quickly after his arrival here also was considered as perhaps significant.

Youreneff, who has been Soviet envoy to Tokyo, was transferred to Berlin only in Mid-May. Hitler could have delayed receiving him until September without violating diplomatic courtesy — especially during the summer season.

Some observers said they would not attach great importance to Hitler's action until they are sure what he meant by "nonintervention."

There were those who held he was referring to the desirability of nonintervention of the Communist International—the world Communist organization which has its headquarters in Moscow—in the affairs of other nations, ncluding Germany as well as Spain.

All Rome Joins To Pay Marconi Final Tribute

Vast Procession Follows His Body Through Ancient Avenues.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 21.—Guglielmo Marconi lay in state tonight in the ancient Church of St. Mary of the Angels after an impressive funeral procession through the streets of Rome.

Premier Mussolini, uniformed as a corporal of the Fascist Militia, joined the procession as it neared the end of the solemn journey from the Royal Academy.

Fascists paid their traditional farewell to a dead comrade before the carved oaken casket was borne into the church for the funeral service.

Throng Shouts in Salute.

As the procession halted in the beautiful Piazza Esedra, Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist Party, stepped forward and cried:

"Guglielmo Marconi."

"Presente!" came the answering shout from thousands massed before the church.

This was the Fascist form for saying that while Marconi was dead he still was with them.

Mgr. Gieuseppe Giovanelli, white-haired pastor of the church, conducted the service which was attended by the late inventor's family diplomatic representatives, the Roman aristocracy, leaders of the nation and representatives of the Pope.

Tonight, as scores of thousands gathered in the Piazza Esedra for a glimpse of the bier, picked Fascist officers mounted guard in the church which Michael Angelo converted from the ruins of the baths of the Roman Emperor Diocletian.

Will Rest in Bologna.

Tomorrow night the body of the inventive genius will be taken to his native Bologna for burial Friday.

The nation's leaders marched beside humble peasants and workers in the 2-mile procession from the academy to the church, passing down rows of black draperies and flags at half staff. Mourners estimated at several hundred thousand looked on.

The body was carried from the academy, where it had lain in state since shortly after the inventor's death yesterday, at 6:05 p. m. and ten minutes later the procession moved on its way.

Ahead of the casket, which was drawn in a richly carved hearse by six black horses, was a group of mounted police, followed by Father Paolo Rappl, the parish priest who administered the last sacrament to Marconi yesterday.

Then came 14 monks bearing candles and chanting a litany.

The hearse was flanked by 36 attendants from the academy, the old Roman capitol and the Senate, dressed in ancient costumes of many colors.

Behind them was an attendant bearing on a pillow Marconi's three-cornered hat of the academy. He was followed by Marconi's relatives and Italian leaders.

Bells of many churches tolled while a muted military band played the funeral march.

Representatives of the United States Embassy who attended the service in the church were Alexander C. Kirk, charge d'affaires; Samuel Reber, secretary, and Capt. Thaddeus Thompson, jr., naval attache.

By the Associated Press.

The House adopted a resolution yesterday expressing regret of the death of Guglielmo Marconi, the enventor of wireless telegraphy.

Cartridge Box Is Clew To Physician's Killer

Providence, R. I., July 21 (AP).—A box of .45 caliber pistol cartridges was the principal clew tonight to the slayer of Dr. George W. Webster, 39-year-old fashionable obstetrician.

Three bullets were gone from the box. Webster was shot twice with bullets of that caliber. A third bullet missed him. John Hanley, jr., 12, found the box near the Webster home. It was traced to the Boston sporting goods firm of Iver Johnson, but D. R. Harvey, store manager, said "it would be impossible" to trace it further.

A Good Appointment.

The appointment of M. Pierre Fournier as governor of the Bank of France is a step in the right direction. It is no reflection upon the high character of his predecessor, M. Labeyrie, to say that the new appointee is more experienced, better trained in economics and finance, and therefore better fitted to discharge the heavy duties of the governorship of the central bank in these critical times.

First in the finance ministry and later as an official of the Bank of France, he has had opportunity to acquire invaluable practical knowledge and experience in dealing with banking and credit problems both in their national and international aspects. His appointment is a guarantee of competent co-operation in the government's program of financial reforms.

Considerable progress has already been made, although the program is obviously not yet complete. Finance Minister Bonnet has not published the details of his economy decrees, but he has promised heavy reductions in extraordinary expenditures during the current year and hopes to reduce the amount borrowed during 1938 by 25,000,000,000 francs. Funds for immediate use will be obtained by revaluation of the gold reserves of the Bank of France.

The only ultimate financial salvation for France, of course, lies in drastic economy in expenditures and increased taxation on a broad base. The new finance minister, M. Bonnet, is fully aware of the urgency of the need and has the courage to act upon his knowledge. The question that remains to be answered is whether the Socialist Party, which M. Blum represents in the cabinet, sufficiently understands the pressing nature of the emergency.

Drastic cuts in governmental outlays and increased taxation are required to preserve the solvency of the French government at home and encourage the repatriation of funds that have left France on a grand scale during the past two years. The French people as a whole do not understand the seriousness of the situation or the pressing nature of the emergency. The authorities ought, therefore, to be extremely frank in order to impress upon them the necessity of assuming burdens that would otherwise appear to be intolerable.

Budge 'Em With Budge!

Without analyzing the scores in the interzone finals between the United States and Germany, it may appear that the Davis Cup series is as good as over. Lacking most of all Fred Perry and also Tuckey for the doubles, England seems in no proper condition to repel the challenge of the Americans. But close scrutiny of the scorings by which Von Cramm and Henkel lost to Don Budge, et al., indicates the dangers of any presuming in the realm of international tennis.

Last year Budge lost to Von Cramm in the British championship play, then beat him in the Davis Cup finals; this year Budge beat Von Cramm in straight sets in the British tournament. That seemed to point to a swift and certain victory for the redhead in this year's interzone meeting. Instead, Von Cramm clearly outplayed Budge for the first two sets and in the crucial fifth marched out to a 4-1 lead which was only stopped by a most inspiring display of courage and skill on the part of the Californian.

As for our No. 2 man, Bitsy Grant, his story was not so phenomenal. Though selected for play before Frankie Parker because of his better seasoning, the little Atlantan's record was scarcely prepossessing. He had beaten Crawford at Forest Hills, but he had lost to Austin in straight sets at Wimbledon. Meanwhile, Parker had not only taken the single set dropped by Budge in the British tournament, but he had also downed Henkel in a five-set match. On his record, Parker should have been our second man against the Germans. At least he should now receive the call against the British.

In a sense, however, the identity of our second man is of only academic interest. Judging from his amazing record to date, our No. 1 man will probably win both his singles matches and, with Mako, the doubles for the three points necessary to shake the British loose from their four-year hold on the Davis Cup. "Budge 'em with Budge!" might well be the battle cry.

The End Of A Vital Chapter.

As the compromise court bill passes into discard, the chief question confronting the Senate is: What can be saved out of the wreckage? Since this is their second defeat on the issue of meddling with the Supreme Court to change its opinions, advocates of the bill appear ready to forsake their major aim and salvage the noncontroversial provisions. The successful opponents will doubtless co-operate in that plan, while closely guarding against encroachment of any sort upon the independence of the courts.

Looking backward over the most dramatic constitutional scrap since the Civil War, this outcome appears to have been inevitable from the beginning. The American people have a deep and abiding faith in the democratic processes of government. And the majority has rightly decided that enlargement of the Supreme Court to influence its decisions would not square with our traditional theory of divided governmental powers. Out of that deep-seated conviction has come a series of knockout blows which no legislative measure could withstand.

If the President had been well advised, he would have abandoned the fight when the Senate Judiciary Committee's hearings proved that the original measure was repugnant to the American concept of self-government. Since then the case against court packing has been greatly strengthened by the Judiciary Committee report, by numerous senatorial speeches, by the revolt of the House Judiciary Committee and Gov. Lehman's statement. Moreover, the Administration's case has been weakened by the resignation of Justice Van Devanter, by various decisions of the Supreme Court, by the abandonment of the original bill and, finally, by the President's letter to Senator Barkley.

For the most part it has been an inspiring fight. It has brought to many members of Congress a quickened sense of their responsibility. It has broken down the dangerous assumption that Administration measures ought to be accepted with little or no questioning. Moreover, the entire country has been awakened to a new appreciation of constitutional government and to the necessity of safeguarding the institutions through which such government has been achieved

This campaign against short-cuts to constitutional changes has been too successful to permit any compromise on the principles for which the opposition has stood. But the way is still open for genuine judicial reform. No doubt the Senators who have blocked encroachments upon the judiciary will gladly join in any genuine move to facilitate the administration of justice.

So far as the Supreme Court is concerned, this move may well take the form of a constitutional amendment fixing a retirement age for justices appointed to the court following ratification of the amendment. Such a change proposed by Congress would doubtless attract overwhelming support.

Reform in the lower courts can be more directly attained by the simple means of appointing new judges where calendars are most congested. With court-packing out of the picture, there is no longer any reason to hold to the myth that congestion is associated with aged judges. That deficiency can now be attacked directly. And if the most obvious remedy for congestion is adopted, the Senate should modify the provisions that would permit the shifting of judges beyond the confines of the circuit to which they are appointed.

In any event, a new bill will be required. Since legislation cannot be satisfactorily drafted on the Senate floor, the most reasonable course is to refer the entire matter back to the Judiciary Committee for further consideration. If there are in such procedure any face-saving advantages for advocates of the discarded bills, no one will begrudge them that satisfaction. But the country is chiefly interested in preserving the independence of the courts and increasing their efficiency.

Gov. Cone Is Right.

Gov. Fred P. Cone of Florida was 100 per cent right when, following the lynching of two colored youths imprisoned in the county jail at Tallahassee for an alleged assault on a policeman, he called that crime "murder" and promised to prosecute the lynchers to "the limit of the law."

Such strong words contrast with the indifference previously displayed by Florida officials to mob murder within their State. At the time of the Greenwood lynching in October, 1934, for instance, the authorities were forewarned that lawless elements were planning a brutal crime. But they did not lift a finger to prevent the reputation of Florida from being dragged into the mud. It is a welcome change, therefore, to see the principal executive officer of the State speak out so clearly against a similar occurrence.

But strong words of condemnation against the unknown sadists who took the law into their own hands is not enough. Gov. Cone and the law enforcement officers of Florida must now follow up the policy he has announced by vigorous action. The culprits must be brought to book and tried for murder. Otherwise it is certain that this latest atrocity will increase the clamor for national anti-lynching legislation such as is already before Congress.

The lynching evil can best be met if local and State officials show a readiness to stamp it out in their own communities. If they fail in this responsibility, their own conduct will stimulate the outcry for Federal action.

The New Majority Leader.

Despite disclaimers of partiality, President Roosevelt is generally believed to have favored Senator Barkley's candidacy for the position of majority leader. That impression grew out of the now famous letter addressed to the Senator from Kentucky as "acting majority leader." As Mr. Barkley had served in that capacity only by request of the late Senator Robinson, he lacked any official standing that would have justified the President's action in thus singling him out.

Under the circumstances, those wise in the ways of politicians concluded that this was an astute move to put the seal of Executive approval upon Mr. Barkley. In spite of the President's later gestures of impartiality, the outcome of the closely fought contest will be generally regarded as a victory for the Administration.

Senator Harrison has had much longer service in the Senate than his victorious opponent. He is head of the important Finance Committee of the Senate and has helped to put through various more or less unpopular tax measures for the Administration. He has been a loyal if not conspicuously enthusiastic supporter of the President's policies in every crisis, although he had registered dissent upon a few less important occasions. Nevertheless, there is a widespread conviction that as leader of the Senate majority Mr. Harrison would have been less amenable to Administration wishes than Mr. Barkley, and more inclined to emphasize the independence of the legislative branch of government.

An incidental but not unimportant handicap from the Administration viewpoint also lay in Mr. Harrison's position as head of the Finance Committee. To have retained that post while taking on new duties would have been very burdensome. To have surrendered this important assignment to Senator King, next in the line of succession, would not have pleased New Deal supporters.

At any rate, there is no doubt that Senator Barkley's selection is highly pleasing to the White House. Everybody will be gratified that the secrecy and completeness of the vote has assured a fair and uncoerced choice. With the fight over the court bill out of the way, the new majority leader will be able to devote himself to the legislative program that has been shoved aside in the heat of that controversy. His will be a much more difficult undertaking than that of his predecessor, Senator Robinson, who until recently could count upon the support of a united Democratic majority to indorse any measure sent down by the White House for approval.

Senator Barkley must first seek to close the breach in the ranks of his party. The qualities that have made him an acceptable leader from the White House viewpoint are his enthusiastic and uncritical conformity. These do not appear to be the characteristics most needed to restore peace between the ardent followers of the New Deal and the group that has now become openly antagonistic.

Senator Barkley says it will be his policy to represent the Administration as well as the Senate in working out the problems that confront the country and the Democratic Party. In practice, however, he will have to decide whether he intends to be a mouthpiece for the Administration or a spokesman for a legislative group working in conjunction with the President on a basis of equality. His choice will not only determine the character of the legislative program in the months ahead but it may also vitally influence the fate of the Democratic Party.

Auto Driving Course.

The death of Washington's sixtieth traffic victim for 1937 was announced on the same day that the chairman of the House District Committee introduced a bill to provide the Capital with a training course for automobile drivers.

Representative Palmisano's proposal is to construct on the flats of Anacostia a sort of oval race track, criss-crossed with avenues and circles, all equipped with traffic lights and signs of the type to be found on Washington streets. On this, prospective drivers as well as those who, although holding permits, have demonstrated incompetency behind the steering wheel, might be coached in safe highway practices. A particularly appealing feature of the institution would be its demonstration room, where drivers with slow reaction times could be discovered, and its physical examination ward, where persons with defective eyesight, hearing or other handicaps to safe driving might be culled out.

Though action on the measure is virtually out of the question this year, it is nonetheless interesting as a new contribution toward the solution of the Capital's vexing highway problem Insofar as it attacks the fundamentals of the difficulty, it is particularly welcome. Signs and fines seem to have availed little in the drive to make the city safer. Perhaps safety education offers better prospects. At least, compulsory tests at the course for all drivers of the rising generation should eventually put a safer average driver on Washington's dangerously intricate traffic arteries.

Help! Mr. Barkley!

"Wants Only Justice."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of these days some one is going to tell the real truth about the Supreme Court fight, and there will be a few new faces in the Senate.

President Roosevelt wants only justice for the American people. It is history our forefathers doubted the integrity of all, and in Article I of the Constitution specifically provided "That all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives" we the people voted to send 400 of our ablest lawyers to the Senate and House of Representatives, to make our laws yet, laws made by them were declared unconstitutional by five judges in the Supreme Court.

It is foolish to say that money will not defeat justice, for on Memorial Day in New York three people were murdered, a prominent lawyer who is defending the murderer brags that he has defeated the electric chair for 123 murders and expects to repeat.

Common citizens cannot understand what interest prompts a judge to continue on the Supreme Court bench, after reaching 75 when he can retire on a salary of $20,000 a year. Has he other interests to serve above seeing that justice is always administered? JOHN RIGGLES.

To Protect Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am aroused and greatly concerned by child crime that is prevalent in all States of our country, and so appalling to the moral standards of society. The cases that are fresh in my mind are those of three little girls of California lured into the woods by a fiendish man, criminally assaulted and choked to death, and that of a 9-year-old girl of Chicago, who met a similar attack. I feel that children of our country are lacking in knowledge of self-protection.

In my opinion it is very necessary and the duty of the Board of Education to direct their teachers to instruct, and instill in the minds of their pupils such protection that will enable them to avoid these horrible attacks.

First, that they must not make the acquaintance of men unknown to the family.

Second, not to beg for candy, pennies or presents, or receive such from men other than their relatives.

Third, under no consideration be persuaded to ride in cars, taxis, to the movies or other places without the consent of parent or teacher.

Washington Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the press there is to be a revival of the project to build a memorial to Thomas Jefferson. While I have no criticism of such a memorial, it would seem wiser to defer it to a time when the country is in a better financial condition and the Administration is not struggling to make both ends meet. If there is connected with this project a plan for employment I would suggest a much more creditable one at this time when we are celebrating the Constitution sesquicentennial, namely, we finish the Washington Monument, which today and for years has been in an uncompleted and discreditable condition.

There is not in Washington, the Nation's Capital, a suitable and fitting memorial to Washington, the "Father of our Country," and the Constitution, to whom we are more indebted for his wisdom and foresight for the future of our country and freedom of the people than to any other member of the Convention. I hope this may be done and wipe out our negligence and prove our boasted honor to Washington's memory.

A Dangerous Short Cut.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter to Senator Barkley the President defends his demand for power over the Supreme Court by referring to "major social improvements" which, in his opinion, cannot be had quickly without a reinterpretation of the Constitution.

Those "objectives" were sketched in his speech at Madison Square Garden and in his annual message of last January. They were summarized as follows by Arthur Krock in the New York Times of May 5:

Improve workers' conditions by reducing overlong hours, increasing starvation wages, ending child labor and extirpating slums and sweatshops. End monopoly in business, support collective bargaining, stop unfair competition and abolish dishonorable trade practices. Work for cheaper electricity on the homes and farms, for better and cheaper transportation, low interest rates, sounder home financing, better banking, better regulation of security issues and reciprocal trade treaties.

End the piling up of huge farm surpluses. Persist in action for better land use, reforestation, conservation of water, drought and flood control, commodity marketing, improvement in the condition of the farm tenants and crop insurance. Provide useful work for the needy.

Mr. Roosevelt has never been specific about the methods by which he proposes to reach his objectives. But none of those named above can be accomplished suddenly, by the mere passage of laws. Most of them involve gradual betterment extending over years. Moreover, most of them are already within the constitutional powers of the Federal Government, and hence are not proper grounds for changing the court. The chief exceptions have to do with invasion of local industry and trade for the purpose of bringing about readjustments in incomes and working conditions by artificial and forcible means, rather than by healthy economic growth.

In short, the Presidential "objectives" that are sound and workable are already constitutional with no change in the Supreme Court. The "objectives" which are unconstitutional are inherently unsound, and could not be made to work by any torturing of constitutional language.

Can it be that Mr. Roosevelt's real purpose is some new and yet bolder seizure of power, hitherto unavowed, which no unpacked court could possibly sustain?

Marconi, Pragmatist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: About 40 years ago ten Londoners each subscribed £500 to form the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., and these original shares are now worth several millions. It is an undisputed fact, which Marconi himself always asserted, that Hertz, Roentgen and Branli discovered the properties of etheric pulsation, but the young Italian convinced those keen city men of the practical application of the theories of these scientists.

Marconi stands out as a great pragmatist whose practical ability carried an idea from the abstraction of the laboratory to the world's market place, where in his early 20s young William founded the company that receives its revenues partly from business concerns all over the world engaged in transmitting radio messages. He was greatly honored; he was a Roman senator for life and doctorates were showered upon him by seats of learning. Although a layman, Marconi's friendship with Pope Pius was due to the latter's interest in science.

We live in a better world today because of swift, instantaneous communication between the farthest corners of the earth. Marconi dedicated himself with intrepidity to the task of bringing space. His outlook on life must have been international, as it is hoped the lives of all human beings shall be some day; he never praised nor criticized in certain matters, but while he did not keep aloof from the preoccupations of his compatriots, Marconi brought a measure of glory to Italy.

Criticism of Mellon Museum Site.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am quoted in the Baltimore Sun of July 4 in an article entitled "Mellon Museum Hit by Ellicott," which refers to my letter to President Roosevelt of June 2 begging him to condemn the assignment of the site on the Mall west of the new National Museum for an art gallery.

Committees under my charge have made representation to the effect that a competent commission should study the National Capital Art Museum requirements and that the Congress should establish a park of upward of 25 acres in which the Mellon collection and all future extension and acquisitions shall find a dignified setting. One may say that every first-class art center in America has from 12 acres to an unlimited space for extension, as in the case in Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo, St. Louis, Boston, Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles, etc.

It would seem that the tragic congestion of Government offices in what is called the Triangle has thrown the Capital out of balance and harmony, whereas at the inception of its study there lay to the south along Constitution avenue a stretch of 4,500 feet with a width of 500 feet reserved for a dignified border of the Mall, which, with buildings properly planned, might have relieved the Triangle of its excess burden.

A great disappointment awaits the public unless Mr. Mellon sees, while there is yet time, that his projected gallery, a design of great beauty, will be in immediate contact with the huge Government offices across Constitution avenue. Such a building as this should have a park site removed from the hurly-burly of driving city life, and all subsequent extensions should be in keeping and subordinated to the chief structure. Since 1893 we have had world fairs, too numerous to mention, and in every case there has been a block plan in which every building, every water garden, and every sculptural group has had its place, in most cases contributing to a splendid, well-balanced and harmonious whole.

Why such lessons have not had their influence in Washington may be explained in various ways. But at bottom it resolves itself into the question of divided counsels and insufficient study. Had the MacMillan commission—Charles McKain, Daniel H. Burnham, St. Gaudens, the greatest of American sculptors, and Frederick Law Olmsted, the famous landscape architect, whose report is even now the standard of all embellishments of the Mall proper—had this commission been made permanent, with moral jurisdiction over the Mall and its immediate environs, there might have been a different story to tell and surely the results would have been far different.

However, the point of this letter is whether the Mellon gallery site of six acres will work to the advantage of art at the National Capital. In my judgment it will not, because, first, there is no adequate space for extension and growth. It will mean a static institution based on long-exploded notion of museum management and development. The Capital should provide a center of spiritual and cultural activity, linking the great past with, we hope, the greater future, reaching to every nook and cranny of this great country and drawing to it a student group, which need hardly go to Rome, Athens, Paris, London or the East for at least elementary study of any kind of art or art history.

"Meestair Woodumupchuck."

WHAT'S the matter with the boys in New York State?

A news item from Albion, N. Y., reports that farmers throughout Orleans County are waging a "war" against woodchucks which have caused an estimated damage of $100,000 to crops in the vicinity.

A farm bureau agent has recommended four methods of attacking the animals: Automobile exhaust pumped through a hose into the burrows; gasoline-soaked rags pushed into the holes and ignited; Carbon disulphide burned in the holes; and calcium cyanide blown into the burrows.

Automobile exhaust?

Gasoline-soaked rags?

Carbon disulphide and calcium cyanide?

What's the matter with .22 rifles in the hands of the boys of the neighborhood?

* * * *

Whisky was the best woodchuck hunter in our town. Of course, he should have been—his father was Pete, the coal man. Pete (nobody except the coal company that hired him to drive its wagons knew his last name, I guess, and probably even they couldn't pronounce it) was a big slouch of a man with a black walrus moustache. When he sat hunched over on the springed seat of the coal wagon, a blue handkerchief was always sticking out of his grimy hip-pocket—the kind of handkerchief girls now wear on their heads when they're playing tennis or riding in a rumble seat.

Pete was a great one for hunting and trapping. Whisky used to take us down into the shed in back of their house and show us rows of muskrat and rabbit skins stretched inside-out to dry on blunt-nosed boards. They'd bring 10 or 15 cents apiece when mailed to a fur company in St. Louis, Whisky said. Once, too, Whisky took us down to see a deerskin his father had been scraping down for tanning. The gory skull, I remember, was in a pail on the floor with the horns sticking out over the top. Whisky said his father would boil it down and mount it for their parlor. He said they had other horns already in the parlor, but we never saw them because Whisky's mother was not his mother, but his stepmother, and she didn't like kids around the house.

* * * *

Whisky had a gun of his own and one spring just after I'd gotten my Savage, we arranged to go out after woodchuck together. He would ride his bike down and be in front of our house at six the next morning.

We biked down the road until we sighted Fairty's farm.

"Now we have look whether Meestair Woodumupchuck iss out of bad yat! said Whisky mimicking his father's broken English.

We cut into some woods to the right and, keeping always up-wind, climbed a high shoulder of ground which would give us a good lookout. A gossamer of fog lay in the hollow below us, but we still could easily see the rows of early carrot and beet sprouts. More important, we could see part way down the slope in an oval patch the plow had left around a submerged boulder a mound of red earth which was the entrace to a woodchuck burrow. In Indian file we sneaked down near the hole—always up-wind—and inspected it. Whisky nudged:

"See, no cobwebs over the hole. That means Meestair Woodumupchuck is here. He breaks 'em going in and out."

Back we crept to the top, finally ending on our stomach in the tall grass. Whisky cocked his gun and I cocked mine. We waited. The fog slowly dribbled down the hollow and vanished in the sun-warmed morning air.

Then out came the woodchuck. I didn't see him at first because he just shoved the tip of his nose out to begin with. For a minute or so he sniffed the air while the three of us went without breath. Then out came his head and shoulders and he looked like a fat submarine commander opening a conning tower. Finally he dragged up his whole body and sat up on his hind legs.

"Shhhh," said Whisky sucking in softly between his teeth.

Suddenly the woodchuck dropped on all fours and scuttled down the bank. Arrived at the bottom, he immediately fell to nibbling holding a cluster of carrot tops between his paws and eating as though his life depended on it. The truth was, of course, his life depended at that moment less on eating than on watching. For Whisky and I drew careful bead and let go almost simultaneously. The woodchuck did a sidewise somersault, clawed his way around in a half circle and lay still. We were at his side just as he twitched his last.

* * * *

In his mouth were still some carrot fronds. Whisky pulled these away showing the two curved teeth characteristic of the marmot family. He looked like a great inflated rat and I treated him as such while Whisky tied his hind legs together and slung him over a stick to carry home.

"Good roastin' meat," he explained. I nodded.

My reward was of a different sort. For weeks and perhaps even months and years afterward I brushed my teeth with a regularity and efficiency that amazed my Mother. The vision of the woodchuck's horrible yellow teeth was the best dentifrice ever devised for me.

Beer in the Bad Lands.

White Lake, S. Dak., July 19.—There may be something significant in those signs which adorn the windows of every bar in Sioux Falls, S. Dak., announcing: "SPIKED BEER SERVED HERE." A barren, savage drink of 190-proof grain alcohol and beer, it seems a fitting beverage with which to toast the misused land which stretches west from the James River to the Black Hills.

TOM McCARTHY.

Possibly, the lack of hospitality to be found in the country west of the James River is simply the reflection of a people robbed by nature of the materials with which to be hospitable. In great measure, however, the abrupt answers and the surly replies which I received were rooted in the fact that I was a hitch-hiker. The hitch-hiker is as welcome in South Dakota as a mad dog!

The phobia of fear and suspicion surrounding the hitch-hiker is well grounded in South Dakota, and understandably so. In the last weeks of May, near the little town of Onida, two thumb tourists, still in their 'teens, slew a young school teacher, who had been kind enough to give them a lift. That ghastly crime has left an indelible impression on the people of the State.

My first contact with the temper of the people in this matter came but a mile or so out of Sioux Falls. I approached a roadside stand shortly after 9 o'clock. I wanted to get a bite to eat. As I approached on foot a dog, tied near the entrance, began to howl.

I called ahead into the stand, "Do you serve sandwiches? I don't want to tackle that dog, unless I can get a bite of lunch." A woman came to the door and let me in. She was visibly nervous, noting my knapsack. Her husband came from a side room, holding a soft-drink bottle very much as a policeman would grasp a blackjack.

• • • •

I TOLD THEM I wanted to buy a sandwich, and asked if they knew any tourist places nearby where I could put up for the night. I had not slept inside in some time and had decided it was time for a change.

After a while their reserve slipped away, as they became convinced that I was not a thug. They commented on "these hitch-hikers," but they seemed a bit ashamed of their suspicions in my case. While I munched a sandwich, the man and his wife endeavored to think of a place in the district where I could find a room for the night.

"I have it," the man said, "there's a cabin place down the line where you might put up for the night reasonably. It's run by a friend of mine."

He went to the phone, made sure they had a cabin for me, even arranged a special rate for my convenience. They he insisted that I wait around for a few minutes while he and his wife closed up, so they could drive me down to the cabins.

They were friendly, courteous, genial people . . . during the short drive . . . and yet, less than 30 minutes before, they had geared themselves for battle, simply because a hitch-hiker had come to their door.

That was the first demonstration of the feeling in South Dakota. Every ride obtained on the 500 miles of road from Sioux City to the Black Hills, had a definite conversational jumping-off place. As soon as I would get in a car, and as regularly as though it had been by formula, my motoring host would explain, "You know, I usually don't pick up hitch-hikers—but, of course, you look all right. Still, you never can tell. Those young boys that murdered that schoolteacher looked all right, too!"

• • • •

IT IS VERY unpleasant to cross a State as wide as South Dakota convincing drivers that you are not a potential murderer.

After crossing the James River, heading west into South Dakota, the land levels off into prairies, seemingly more vast, and certainly more desolate, than the unbroken stretches of wheatland seen in Kansas.

As I left Mitchell, the temperature was well over 100 in the sun, and much of my traveling was accomplished on foot. When I arrived in the town of White Lake, I was tired, broke and hungry.

White Lake is a little town of about 500 people set in the midst of a vast, level plain. It has one principal restaurant, located . . . as are all its businesses . . . on the two blocks of main street which comprise not only the business section but, also, the biggest portion of the town.

The boss wasn't there, so I decided I'd wait. Finally, he came in, probably forewarned of my presence, for when I called to him, he said, "All right, state your business!" He said it with a rather forbidding inflection.

"I'd like to speak to you a moment, please."

"I can hear, all right," he said. He was a chunky man of medium height, with a face as broad as it was long.

"I'm traveling," I said, "and have run out of money in your town. Will you let me do some work for a meal?"

"Nope." He looked very content as he said it.

"What would you do?" I asked him, "if you had no food and couldn't get a meal?"

"I'd settle down like the rest of the people," he said, "and go to work like other folks."

• • • •

A CUSTOMER in the restaurant gave me some money on the basis of the conversation with the restaurant proprietor, but that didn't settle my troubles in White Lake. I went to one of the local bars to get a sandwich.

As I entered the bar with my knapsack, a dozen heads turned, and 24 eyes expressed suspicion. I asked the bartender if he served sandwiches. He kept glancing at my knapsack, and refused to answer. I asked him again, and there was still no answer. He just kept looking at my dusty clothing and knapsack.

Finally, I put some change on the bar, and said, "Do you serve sandwiches?" He looked at the money and said, "Yes, sir."

While I ate I glanced around the crowded barroom. There must have been at least 30 people in the poorly lighted room. Farmers and farmhands, they drank stolidly with no sound of laughter. There was, if anything, a sullen undercurrent which touched all of them alike.

At this time, I didn't place much emphasis on this. I thought the sourness I saw in the faces about me, merely another indication of Dakotan resentment to itinerants.

Possibly, it was partly that; but I later discovered that White Lake had good reason to be suspicious, unfriendly, churlish. Set in the midst of a sun-dried plain, it . . . like the rest of that part of South Dakota . . . had known five years of poverty and drought. Even while I was there, the farmers were mourning the intense heat which, as it persists, reduced their crops to 50 per cent of their expectancy.

In a statement credited to the parish clergyman, I was informed that, in 18 months, 68 families had moved from White Lake, a town of about 500 inhabitants, originally.

Economic Results Of Slums

By Miles R. Frisbie.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

RELATIVELY too much emphasis has been placed by proponents of housing and slum reclamation upon the social values of such programs. Social values are implicit in such activities. It is the slighted economic values that need presentation to a Nation that while liberal in its thinking is conservative in its economic action.

When housing and slum reclamation are examined from the standpoint of reality instead of intangibility, when their economic consequences are tried on the counter of the market-place, in the familiar terms of dollars and cents, it appears that such programs are financially sound and economically valuable. Such an examination clears these programs, which are essentially problems of finance and engineering, of the mystery with which social gibberish has surrounded them.

The British and continental people treat them after this manner. The only question is how much money can be expended each year. So soon as this has been determined, the job takes on the nature of any other public works activity.

In the preface of a brochure published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, entitled "Balanced Rebuilding of Cities," is this statement: "If each city resident could be made to realize the very large extent to which his savings and investments are in urban areas, then doubtless more interest would be manifested in the preservation of the character and stability of cities and in the city development programs . . . . designed to check blight and excessive decentralization in their respective cities. It is a fertile field for promotion of the public welfare as well as for individual and collective dividends."

Urban Property Worth Roughly $70,000,000,000.

THE ASSESSED valuation of property in the 24 largest cities in 1935 was $56,327,000,000. While much urban property is overassessed, the balance is on the other side and a fair estimate of the real value of such property would be approximately $70,000,000,000. Against this there were in 1935 mortgage investments of fiduciary institutions and private individuals of $16,000,000,000.

The actual value of the physical property and the total of the mortgage investment are but a part of the picture, for on the ability of American cities to collect their taxes depends also the security of $8,250,000,000 of municipal bonds.

How sound is the economic structure of the urban areas upon which this huge investment is based is, therefore, a pertinent inquiry to the millions of American families whose savings are invested with mutual savings banks, life insurance companies, savings and loan associations, State banks, trust companies and national banks.

If there are trends that have developed in common among these cities that are impairing the basic values behind these investments, then a condition confronts the Nation which makes it essential that the facts be known.

Cleveland Findings Might Apply Generally.

RESEARCH carried on by the city of Cleveland disclosed realities as to the cost of slum and blighting areas that are typical of most American cities.

In a particular area consisting of six census tracts, comprising 333 acreas, or 73 per cent of the land area of the city and located just beyond the business district of the city—generally the locale of city slums—the population in 1930 was 22,236. For the past 15 years the people have been moving out of this district, the decrease in population between 1920 and 1930 being 27 per cent.

In order to determine the amount of real estate tax income of this area, the appraised value of each taxable lot and building in the area was found. Their individual values were then totaled and computed at the tax rate for the year under consideration. The result was the real estate tax income for the section for the year which amounted to $225,035. This is potential not actual income, indicating the amount the city would have received if all the taxes had been paid in full. The delinquency was, however, heavy, as the accumulated tax delinquency certified as of the end of that year was $37,000 or 16.4 per cent of the potential income. It appears then that $225,000 was far in excess of the actual city income from the area, so $225,000 will be used in all comparisons.

The county share in the taxes from this area was $43,926. In the same period the county spent in the section $176,322. Net cost to the county of the sum spent over sum received was $132,396. Potential city income from the area was $90,364. The city expended in the area $818,729. Net cost to the city or net loss from the area was $728,365. The school board's portion of taxes from the district amounted to $90,745 while its expenditures were $361,927. Net cost to school board $271,182.

The three taxing authorities, county, city and school board, which should have received $225,035 from the area in taxes while they spent in same area $1,356,988. are operating loss of $1,131,953. In reaching these figures costs of city and county administration and other similar items are omitted. To have added them would have shown further heavy increases in the deficit, but the figures are dramatic enough as they are. The annual financial loss suffered by the Government in these areas would in a few years eat up the total value of the taxable property.

European Countries Liquidate Deficit Areas.

CONFRONTED with such a condition, European countries declare the buildings in such area valueless and proceed to buy all taxable land therein. That is, European city governments treat such a deficit area as a business concern treats a deficit department; they liquidate it and then proceed to turn it to a profitable use.

The instance cited above is typical of similar areas in cities throughout the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

It is apparent then that there is a destructive or "detrimental trend" which, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States' committee on construction and civic development is "impairing urban residential areas, which constitute so important a part of every city's economic structure. These trends all evidenced in this typical example, are:

"1. Withdrawal of population to suburban areas.

"2. Emergence of large blighted districts.

"3. Depreciation of property values.

"4. Impairment of city's tax structure.

"5. Increased cost of police, fire and welfare services in the worst of the run-down areas."

Not all the residential deficit areas are slums. Some are in blighting areas, others are in sparsely settled periphery sections of the city where costly city services have been installed and are maintained so that real estate operators and speculative builders may find a market for their wares.

But to get at the true picture of the economic consequences of a slum, it should be compared with a similar picture of a normal neighborhood. If the normal neighborhood is self-supporting, then the conclusion is inescapable that slum areas are a drain upon a city.

Other Cities Today Conducting Inquiries.

FORTUNATELY there has been much research work along this line done by the forward looking local housing authorities in Boston, Cleveland, Yonkers, Schenectady and Syracuse, whose studies constitute some of the most significant chapters in modern public housing and city planning.

The Boston reports indicate what may be expected, at least so far as studies of small areas are concerned. Six different areas were studied and compared. Four areas were residential districts, the others were commercial and industrial.

Reducing this to a per net acre formula, it was established that commercial, industrial, high rental residential and standard residential sections show an operating profit of from $110,146 per net acre in the business area to $5,444 for the normal or standard residential section. The other residential districts show a loss. The deficit for the periphery district was $803 and for the low rental district $15,104. Translated into terms of people, the high-rental districts show a profit of $239 per resident; the standard residential area a profit of $49.30 per resident, while the periphery district registered a loss of $20,50 and the low rental district a per capita loss of $79.

This figure of $79 per capita loss in the low rental district checks with the per capita loss in the typical area used as an example.

In candor it must be stated that reclamation of slum areas and erection of low-rent public housing alone will not cure all this wastage and loss in deficit areas. Nevertheless an intelligent program should reduce deficits materially. Some of the high governmental costs in slum areas are due directly to the poverty of the inhabitants and not to bad housing or squalid environment.

Public low-rent housing is not a purpose by itself. Neither is slum reclamation or the rehabilitation of central residential areas, now tending to blight and eventual slum. All of these programs are integrated parts of a broad long range policy with respect to municipal land policy.

Prompt, courageous, corrective action is needed to restore and maintain the balance in the growth of city residential areas. This is the true function of the municipal housing authority. It has nothing to do with "make-work" programs or "pump priming." It is a program of its own, claiming public funds and public support on its own merits.

Federal Assistance Needed In Beginning.

THE INITIATION of such a program requires Federal assistance to get it under way. Clinic projects must be initiated in cities having authorities experienced in this field, fortified by painstaking research, supported by informed local public opinion and implemented with State laws and judicial decisions.

That the program is one which will entail over a long period of years the expenditure of large sums of money need cause no dismay. No city, even the smallest, is going to be rebuilt in one year or several years. The program is a continuing one, keeping step with the life of each city in which it will have operation.

The utilities in American cities were not installed at once. They grew with the cities and are still growing. In only a few cities are they entirely adequate. If 50 years ago an attempt had been made to appraise the expenditure that would be required for sewers, pavements, lighting and schools for the cities of America during the following half century, the amount of money required would have paralyzed effort. But the cities have found the money and once this new program for the economic rehabilitation of American cities has been set under way through Federal assistance, the cities themselves will find the money to carry forward this profitable program, which will lift the living standards of one-third of the Nation and at the same time safeguard the billions of capital investment in urban real estate.

Had facts such as these been presented to the American people when the national program of housing and slum reclamation was projected, the demand for such a program would have come from business and finance for the employment of Federal money for the protection of the more than $100,000,000,000 invested in urban real estate, just as Federal money was employed through the RFC and other agencies to protect the national investment in railroads, banks, life insurance companies and other fiduciary institutions.

If Federal aid was justified during the worst years of the depression for such institutions, is it not equally as well justified at the present moment for the protection of the urban real estate investment?

Housing authorities in 50 cities in 31 States are ready to launch their programs as soon as the Wagner-Steagall bill is enacted. Rehabilitation work will also begin in rural areas and grave social and economic questions which may no longer be deferred will have found their answer.

Ousted WPA Group Plans March Here

A march on Washington of recently discharged WPA workers was announced yesterday by the Workers' Alliance of America, the columns to converge here August 23.

Purpose of the march, according to officials, is to urge passage of the Allen-Schwellenbach bill which would prevent the discharge of WPA employes. To date 427,000 have been laid off and 300,000 more are scheduled to follow October 15, according to David Lasser, president of the Workers' Alliance.

A request for the use of Army tents used by the Boy Scouts was forwarded to the War Department yesterday, Lasser said. He stated an effort will be made to persuade the United States Chamber of Commerce to intercede for laid off WPA workers in private industry.

Unofficial War

By Barnet Nover

The Convenience Of A Myth

WHEN THE Briand-Kellogg pact was signed nine years ago, there were optimistic souls who believed that through this dramatic act of abnegation, war had forever been abolished in the world.

Actually the only change in international relations that the Paris pact has brought about has been to do away not with wars but with declarations of wars. The difference is profound and disturbing.

On Tuesday, for instance, the Chinese town of Wanping was bombarded by Japanese artillery. The famous Marco Polo Bridge was destroyed. From the common sense point of view there could be no question that this bombardment constituted an act of war which, says Webster, is "the state or fact of exerting violence or force against another . . . especially a contest by force between two or more nations or states carried on for any purpose."

• • • •

YET, SO FAR as the chancellories are concerned, including our own government, no state of war exists as between China and Japan. And it is prayerfully hoped that no matter how many clashes take place in the Peiping area and elsewhere in North China this convenient myth be preserved. For as things stand now the fiction of peace is something worth clinging to, no matter what happens to its substance.

Were China or Japan actually to declare that it is in a state of war with the other nation, the myth would be shattered. But until then, no matter what happens, the nations can ignore even what is obvious. For the world has developed a remarkable capacity to apply a Nelson eye to inconvenient and dangerous realities so long as these realities are not called by their proper names.

There was no declaration of war by China when the Russian consular officials in Harbin were expelled in 1929 and the Manchurian authorities took over the Chinese Eastern Railway in which Russia had a half-interest. And Russia showed similar forbearance when, after some months of fruitless negotiations, the Soviet government sent troops into Manchuria to restore the status quo regarding the railroad.

• • • •

TWO YEARS later the Japanese army began to spread its tentacies over the whole of northeastern China. But neither then, nor at the time of the bombardment of Shanghai did it observe the old rule that hostilities are to be preceded by declarations of war.

To have done so would have meant taking needless risks. Similarly Italy never declared war on Ethiopia before it sent its legions into the land ruled by the Negus nor have Germany and Italy formally admitted the existence of an actual state of war between them and Spain. Again, it was more advantageous to deny the existence of war than to admit it. In denying they were waging war the Fascist powers were in a position to capitalize the anxiety of the other powers to avoid embarrassment.

Now Japan is once again waging war on China and once more the nations of the world, including the United States, are willing to ignore a seemingly minor and localized conflict in order, as they see it, to keep it from developing into a major war. Yet the succession of events in the past few years shows that this ostrich policy only tends to bring nearer the dangers it would avoid.

• • • •

IT IS CLEAR from this that both aggressors and peaceful nations have found it to their seeming advantage to preserve the myth of peace in the face of the reality of actual war.

If the aggressors, by waging undeclared wars, have clearly profited from this state of affairs, the other nations have been able to continue harboring the illusion of peace when there has been no peace.

Certainly, so far as the United States is concerned, while we did succumb to an attack of realism in 1935 when the fact of war was recognized so far as the Italo-Ethiopian struggle was concerned, we have since thought better of such rashness.

For months we have clung desperately to the fiction that only the Spanish loyalists and insurgents have been fighting in Spain so that the neutrality act need be applied only to them. The government has resisted efforts to get it to apply the law to Germany and Italy as well and the Fascist powers have made it easier for us to pursue such a course by heroically abstaining from declaring war on Valencia. They have not hesitated, however, to admit their stake in the Spanish fighting and to act as allies of Franco.

• • • •

JAPAN AND CHINA may now be equally thoughtful of our plight by not declaring war against each other. If they did, the fat would certainly be in the fire so far as our neutrality law is concerned. We should then be compelled to apply it and in so doing to become the purveyor of Japan but not of China and thus the de facto ally of the island empire in its war against a nation whose friend we have been since the United States was formed. Yet such a course would run counter to our instincts, our sentiments and our interests. However, if it is only a question of undeclared war, our neutrality law can remain a triumphant expression of our will to peace and need never be applied. We can eat our cake and have it, too.

The Far Eastern mess has brought into vivid focus the unreality of illusions we have all too long been entertaining. But whether this objective lesson in the absurdity of writing laws for an unknown future will be learned is not so clear.

Scottish Poet

By William Lyon Phelps

Bobbie Burns.

The greatest poet Scotland ever produced died on July 21, 1796, at the age of 37.

If you will look at the map of Scotland, and will take a ruler and draw a pencil line between Glasgow on the west and Edinburgh on the east, you will see that the part of Scotland south of that line is a small strip of territory, but it produced the three greatest writers in her history, and they are all three identified with this bit of territory—Burns in the southwest, Carlyle in the south and Scott in the southeast.

• • • •

These three men of genius were as unlike as three writers could well be; one the great lyric poet, one the great essayist and historian, and one the great romancer; yet Carlyle, when he wrote his essay "The Hero as a Man of Letters," chose Burns as one of the three, the other two being Dr. Johnson and Rousseau.

Probably the majority of Burns' readers prefer his famous ballads and songs in dialect, and no writer has ever been more ardently loved by millions. Here it is nearly 200 years after his birth and millions think of him today as Bobbie Burns, that is, as of a personal and inexpressibly dear intimate friend. For he was not only a great artist, his personality exerts and always will exert an hypnotic power.

• • • •

Among his numerous lyrical masterpieces, there is none I like better than the following, one of the most passionate love poems in any language, and I have always thought that Fitzgerald, when he wrote his version of Omar Khayyam, consciously or unconsciously lifted two lines, merely changing the desert into a wilderness. Don't you think so?

O, were thou in the caul blast,
On yonder lea, on yonder lea;
My plaidie to the angry airt,
I'd shelter thee, I'd shelter thee;
Or did misfortune's bitter storms
Around thee blaw, around thee blaw,
Thy bield should be my bosom,
To share it a', to share it a'.

Or were I in the wildest waste,
Sae black and bare, sae black and bare,
The desert were a paradise.
If thou wert there, if thou wert there!
Or were I monarch o' the globe,
Wi' thee to reign, wi' thee to reign,
The brightest jewel in my crown,

De Valera Wins Third Term as Irish President

Supporters Cheer for 'Free and United' Nation; Vote, 82-52.

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, July 21.—Tall, austere Eamon De Valera today was elected to a third term as President of the Irish Free State while his supporters cheered for a "united and free Ireland."

The New York-born president met a new test in his stormy career and emerged victor with a 30-vote majority in the Dail (parliament).

His chief opponent, former President T. Cosgrave, unsuccessfully sought to align the labor bloc with Cosgrave supporters against De Valera. He asserted that economic ills growing from Anglo-Irish disputes are among "the eviles gradually undermining the welfare of all sections of the community."

The Dail voted, 82 to 52, to return De Valera to office, however. Frank Fahy, a member of De Valera's Fianna Fail Party, was named speaker of the Dail and a laborite, Patrick Sogam, deputy speaker.

The new Dail in which the Fianna Fail won 69 seats, a number equal to those held by all other parties combined, adjourned until October 6.

Voters at the recent elections approved De Valera's new constitution that severs the last links with Great Britain and changes the name of the country to Eire, the ancient Gaelic designation.

First elected President in 1932, De Valera immediately started to put into operation his anti-British policies that culminated in the new constitution.

His program aims toward stimulating Irish industry and agriculture to make the Free State economically self-sufficient, a goal he believes will mean complete independence.

Serbian Churches Fan Opposition to VaticanConcordat

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 21 (AP).—Serbian orthodox churches tolled their bells continuously today while the cabinet and parliament secretly discussed orthodox objections to the proposed Vatican concordat.

Police dispersed a large crowd of demonstrators in front of the Serbian cathedral this afternoon, arresting several. Parliament was mostly orderly, except once, when oppositionists bitterly attacked ratification of the concordat.

There were reports of demonstrations in several Serbian towns.

Lehman 'Disloyal,' Gov. Earle Asserts

Harrisburg, Pa., July 21 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle said today Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, was "guilty of great disloyalty and a great mistake in judgment" in opposing the President's court reorganization plan.

Earle said "I still think Gov. Lehman is a liberal socially, but I am very much afraid he is not a liberal economically."

"I think if Lehman had come out when he wrote the President originally telling his full stand on the issue I would not charge him with disloyalty," Earle said. "I think that to spring it on the President at a crucial moment was disloyal."

Lehman said he had written to the President months ago about his stand on the court issue.

Savant Warns U. S. To Find More Oil

Moscow, July 21 (AP).—A Russian scientist tonight told the International Congress of Geologists that the discovery of 10 or 12 new oil fields annually would be necessary to maintain United States reserves against an annual national consumption of 1,000,000,000 barrels.

The vice president of the Russian Academy of Science, Ivan Gubkin, declared that such new fields must be capable of producing 100,000,000 barrels a year each to keep future reserves intact.

He discounted alarm concerning exhaustion of the world's petroleum sources, however, and estimated the total world reserve at 7,075,200,000 tons which he said would be sufficient for many years.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Land o' Goshen!

The horse may not be coming back, but they are delaying his burial.

Trotting tracks are having their biggest year all over America, the Hambletonian at Goshen will draw its greatest crowd and, despite the fact that airplanes, speedboats and automobiles are breaking speed records everywhere, the outstanding sporting event of 1937 will be an international race between a couple of hosses!

• • • •

Mussolini has sent Muscletame, his pet trotter, to America for a $10,000 match race against Greyhound, the crack trotter of this country, and if it does nothing else it will bring back the old cracker-barrel flavor to American life for a few weeks.

• • • •

With the whole world yelling for more speed, clamoring for miracles and boasting about its mechanical triumphs, it is a relief to get into an atmosphere where a man out riding in a two-wheeled sulky thinks he is going fast enough.

• • • •

With the planet sputtering with superpassenger planes, bombers, trip-to-the-moon rockets and war machines, it is mighty comfortable to know there are still people who attach some importance to minor matters like greasing an axle, and adjusting the horsefly net.

• • • •

With so many responsible leaders of America dashing all over the lot, pop-eyed, breathless and hysterical, it is consoling to see somebody quietly harnessing a horse, and murmuring "Steady! Steady!"

• • • •

With nine out of ten people popping off half-cocked, thumping tables and adding to the general static, it's a grand relief to take time out to go to a Grand Circuit meeting in Goshen where you will meet that rare customer, an old-fashioned American who doesn't talk much.

• • • •

With so many Americans making goofy proposals for rebuilding the universe and shrieking into mircophones, it's a pleasure to locate those old-timers who attach as much importance to "Whoa!" as to "Giddap!"

• • • •

Believe it or not, at a trotting meet you will find dozens of quiet, calm, efficient-looking men who can't make a speech, have no plans for reconstructing the social system, and are not hell-bent for a filibuster, a sit-down strike, a riot or a war.

• • • •

At a harness-racing track you actually have a swell chance of rediscovering an American who has no program except to get back intact with the same vehicle he started out with. (And not kill anything in the process.)

• • • •

Those trotting races are a treat, brother. More power to 'em!

A judge has ruled that Mae West had a husband and must now pay all the costs of his suit to prove it. The court holds that a married pair don't have to live together to establish a marriage and that it might be better if they didn't.

New York's more fashionable night clubs now have a waiting list of people wishing to be robbed in their limousines after leaving the clubs.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Crazed With Loneliness Because Man Who Befriended Her Has Left Town, Jobless Girl Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl in my twenties. About a year ago I came to Washington to find work but have only had small part-time jobs. I have no family, other than a married brother who is financially unable to help me. However, a friend of my brother's—a young lawyer here—has tried to help me, and has given me money from time to time. Now he has been sent to another city for an indefinite time and I am desperate, for two reasons. One is that I am out of work and frightened at being left entirely "on my own," and the other is that I am crazily in love with this man. He seems to be fond of me, in a way, but I think he is more sorry for me than anything else.

* * * *

He goes with several girls but I don't think he cares for any of them. The day he left town he was driven to the Station by a woman friend who called for him at his apartment. I didn't know he had made this arrangement, and I called on him there before he left. I had hoped he might realize, at the last moment, how much he meant to me, and might even discover some love in his heart for me.

* * * *

Only a few minutes after I arrived, however, this other woman came. He seemed very provoked because she found me there. She looked surprised and barely spoke, then left and waited downstairs in her car. He looked worried and was very stiff with me after that. I am nearly wild. If I had the money I would go to him and throw myself on his mercy. But I'm afraid I've lost whatever chance I ever had with him.

* * * *

I have a feeling he may be more interested in this woman than he knows. I have thought of going to her and telling her that I love him and he belongs to me. Maybe she might give him up. He said they were just good friends. Please tell me what to do? How to win him? I am in desperate need of sane advice. Thank you. A. T.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR A. T.: You are, indeed, "in desperate need of sane advice," if you are seriously considering going either to this man and throwing yourself on his mercy, or to his woman friend and telling her that he belongs to you. Such wild notions could only suggest themselves to a person temporarily beside herself with fear and loneliness. The first becalming statement I have to make is this—the man is not so all-important to you as he seems just now to be.

* * * *

What you need, above all else, is a permanent job paying a sustaining wage. And secondly, a handful of casual social contacts—persons with whom you could lunch or dine occasionally; with whom you could go walking or to the movies; with whom you could spend an evening just talking. It makes relatively little difference whether they be old or young, male or female, just so they be average human contacts. Thirdly, just now, you have need of a creed or philosophy which would give you hope and courage and optimism and an inexhaustible well of inner strength. I suggest, at the risk of causing cynical eyebrows to lift in amusement, that you go—not to the man or to the woman—but to church.

* * * *

Those who have not read Marjorie Hillis' second book, "Orchids on Your Budget" (she, you know, is the author of that sophisticated best-seller, "Live Alone and Like It") may be surprised to know that she, too, dares offer the same advice to those who find themselves jobless, friendless and temporarily lost in despair. Banish fear from your mind, introduce peace to your spirit and establish rational control over your actions, if you expect to enjoy material and social success.

* * * *

You sorely need a personal confidante; someone to whom you can pour out your whole tortured story in detail; someone who will give you a sympathetic ear and day-by-day counsel. If you hesitate to go to church; if you doubt the efficacy of spiritual curatives; if you prefer another medium of consolation and instruction, why not go to the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033?

* * * *

When a person has reached the mental extremity you have reached, inaction is maddening and dangerous. The remedy lies in constructive action. I predict with confidence that if you will avail yourself of experienced, impersonal guidance in this emotional crisis, you will win through to adequate happiness and success. Through learning to stand on your own feet in the man's absence—as you can learn to do if you will—you may be doing the one thing needed to turn his erstwhile pitying fondness into love. In my opinion, the most damaging thing you could do—so far as his friendship is concerned—is to approach either him or the woman on the mission you hypothesize.

M. H.

Pastel Shades Lend Coolness, Doctor Says

EIGHT pastel-colored summer dresses not only look cooler but are cooler, according to Dr. Robert A. Fraser, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Co. Light colors and white, he points out, reflect light and absorb less than deeper colors. The following suggestions on dressing for summer have been given by Dr. Fraser:

For men suspenders are preferable to a belt as the weight of clothing is best carried by the shoulders.

Women should dispense with foundation garments of heavy materials, especially the type of garment that is excessively boned, unless a physician advises to the contrary. Lightweight, two-way stretch materials permit more freedom and are not apt to impede circulation during exercise.

Comfortable shoes and hose are important. Sneakers while usually required for tennis should not be worn continuously, particularly by adults as they give the arches little support and the whole foot has a tendency to spread.

On vacation trips a sweater should be taken along for use after vigorous exercise and as a safeguard against the chill of evening air.

The person who swims several times a day should have two bathing suits so that a dry suit always will be available.

A Madame Tussaud of Wax Foods

The appetizing watermelon and other edibles shown above will never be eaten because they are of wax. Their creator, Mrs. Russell Roller, nationally known for her modeling of food products for use in governmental and educational displays is shown with her handiwork.

Perfect Models of Food Made For State Fairs by Mrs. Roller

No Cook, but an Artist, the Skill of Former U. S. Department of Exhibits Worker Has Gained Wide Fame.

By Margaret Davis.

Mrs. Russell Roller is no cook. Her job is making food that will never be eaten. She makes models that pass for food and has succeeded so well in perfecting the art that her work can be used to illustrate such points as the minor differences between grades of meat cuts. She is probably responsible for the food displays you saw at your last State fair, centennial or exposition.

Her methods are those of an artist and differ markedly from those of the culinary experts.

In most cases she is provided with a sample of the edible she is being asked to recreate. Her first task is to weigh the food, for weight is important in display work and this information must be recorded. That done, she makes a plaster mold, applying the plaster directly to the food whether it be a prime rib roast that has been cooked at 450 degrees constant or ice cream with chocolate sauce, cottage cheese, butter, or whipped cream.

Mold Made in Pieces.

The mold, made in pieces which number anywhere from 10 to 14 and 15, is removed from the subject and fitted together to make a shell in which to pour the wax model, the basis of the finished piece. Tinting the wax to the basic color, Mrs. Roller proceeds from this stage with oil paints, fingernail polish, salt, pepper, cloves and other materials. With the cleverness and deftness of a real artist, she does with wax and foods what Mme. Tussaud has been doing with wax and people for a long time.

In working with cooked foods, Mrs. Roller must duplicate juices and drippings, in amount and appearance. Small objects, such as diced carrots are modeled from wax without the preliminary casting. In the cases of carrots and beets, different shades of wax are used and no painting is necessary. Parsley is achieved through a clever manipulation of paper, and lettuce.

Mrs. Roller's skill has become widely recognized. She has had many offers from private concerns, but except for a brief period when she did work for a national meat company, she has been employed by the National Government only. During her 12 years of modeling for the department of exhibits, she also did outside work, and is now operating her own studio at her home in Takoma Park, D. C., 7135 Chestnut street.

Used by Diabetics.

Although the most public presentation of her work has been made through fair exhibits, her models have been used extensively in the visual education of the diabetic patient who must eat a measure diet.

Mrs. Roller calls Frances Stern, noted dietitian of the Boston dispensary and writer on dietetics, the patron saint of this branch of her work. It was Miss Stern, who visiting in Washington and seeing the work Mrs. Roller had done for exhibition purposes, realized the economy and convenience with which similar models might be used in her business. Until that time it had been necessary for real food to be used to allow the patient just how much he might or should eat of a given food each day. Miss Stern found models particularly helpful in explaining the diet to foreign patients who could judge the size of an orange that they should eat, once they had seen it, but who were bewildered at the mention of a one-gram orange.

Since that time, Mrs. Roller has filled requests from hospitals and universities throughout the country.

Several years ago, the Pan-American Union ordered a group of diseased meats, which she copied from pickled originals for a pathological display at the medical congress of Ecuador in South America. Crossing the equator held no worries for Mrs. Roller's beeswax models. They are nonperishable in any climate and are surprisingly sturdy.

To the stock question of, "How did you get started?" Mrs. Roller's reply presented an interesting example of "The child is father of the man." "I always modeled," she said. "I used to model in mashed potatoes, and with Christmas-tree candle wax . . . I used to use the wax to make my dolls have mumps and change their noses . . . and the big black eyebrows on baby dolls used to bother me . . . I would cover them up with pink wax." And then she made a wax leg for a favorite doll who lost one of his when she took him swimming.

Her first serious wax modeling was in the department of exhibits. She had been working there for some time and brought to the office one day a wax replica of a 14-month-old baby which she had modeled after a baby picture of her daughter. Dressed in child's clothes and with weighted feet so that it could walk, the model was taken for a live person.

A Bit Lumpy.

"It was good but rather lumpy," Mrs. Roller said, "because I had modeled it directly in the wax." She hadn't yet learned to make a mold of her model and then cast in wax.

Before that time, the department had sent outside for any food models that were needed, and had used very inferior ones. Supplied with a New York Museum of Natural History bulletin on modeling leaves, Mrs. Roller was asked to experiment. The bulletin gave her information about making a mold and then casting in wax. Her first creation was a cabbage leaf. Her first assignment for exhibit was a rib roast, sent over hot, greasy and sizzling from the Department of Home Economics. It was much the most complex thing she had ever tackled, but she stuck with it and in her own words, "learned about rib roasts from it." The model is still in use.

Some of the new hats, shown by John-Fredericks, a leading designer, were gay with chicken feathers from the barnyard Plymouth Rock.

Some had a brush trimming, like the end of a shaving brush, and some were shaped like witches' hats, with a tall peaked crown.

"Hats are very, very, very I don't know what," said the blithe John, who called it "one of the most important collections of my career."

"This," he said," is my little chicken number."

It was a peaked hat covered with black and white Plymouth Rock feathers, with a short chicken feather sports coat to match. A ruff of rooster feathers was another new note.

"Skirts are shorter, hats are higher," said John. "Don't ask for a lower crown. I won't give it to you.

Good Manners for Every Day

Good manners and poise when we go visiting! That's what brings return invitations.

There should be no awkward "You before me, my dear Alphonse" act at the door. The charming hostess and her wellbred guest know that the guest enters first—unless the hostess must lead the way through a dark hallway. In this case she says "Excuse me for going first."

A guest staying overnight or longer usually brings her hostess a small gift or sends one soon after leaving. She has inexpensive toys for the children of her hostess.

She brings as little baggage as possible—never a trunk if she can avoid it. Trunks require bothersome delivery arrangements and are likely to mar furniture and walls.

The perfect guest fits into the family schedule for going to bed, getting up, and eating.

If there's a maid, the guest, on leaving, gives her a tip, thanks her for her services. She writes a bread-and-butter letter within a few days telling her hostess how much she enjoyed her visit.

The gracious hostess provides as well as she can for her guests' comforts. She leaves them some free time—doesn't arrange every minute of their day. If she drives them in her car, she lets her women guests enter first, offering choice positions to older women.

Observing small points of etiquette makes for popularity. Learn from our 40-page booklet, Etiquette for Every Day, good usage in dining, theater-going, traveling, introductions. Have the self-confidence gracious manners give.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, July 21.

ONE of the most interesting things to note in the city's passing parade is the way the carriage and stride of our stylish sisters change with the fashion of the day. In the days of the old-time hobble skirts, they struggle along like mummies, and every shift in style gives them a different manner of walking. This summer the gait of the girls on the avenue has an original touch at both extremities, the head and the hoof. Wearing the wide-brimmed, flat-topped hats which perch so precariously on short hair, they walk with heads bent and trying to do a delicate job of balancing, ducking their top pieces in the face of any breeze that's going. They remind me of people bucking storms while carrying open bumbleshoots.

ALICE HUGHES.

The women's feet are no less distinctive this summer. With the foot almost entirely exposed save for the few straps necessary to bind the sole to the ankle, the girls seem to be walking on eggs, always conscious of the foot-nudity. This feeling of insecurity makes them walk on their toes and the balls of their feet, as we were all taught to do in childhood, instead of clumping along on the heels. The odd feature of this toe-stepping is to see the heel rising 6 inches above the toe. In spite of this peculiar position, orthopedic specialists maintain American women's feet have not been in as good condition in years, due to all the air and sunshine our free toes and heels now are permitted.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Frances (Robbie) Robinson, famous secretary of sputtering Gen. Hugh Johnson, blew into town and sat down to lunch with me at the Savoy Plaza the other day. I must say that as one of the most talked-of young women in the country during the short life of NRA, "Robbie" kept her head and never went haywire. She still is the same nervous, energetic little dynamo as in those days when the blue eagle seemed to be replacing the American flag as our national emblem . . .

Flying 65 floors to Mr. Rockefeller's rainbow room a few nights ago, I was amazed to find, as a feature of the summer show, a trained pony whose boss is a young man called Texas Tommie. The pony does his trick on the dance floor, hallowed by some of the world's greatest entertainers, and as far as I can learn the little creature has set a new world's altitude record for ponies . . .

Among our most interesting visitors recently were seven Chinese nurses who brought to this country the wealthy Snite boy, a victim of infantile paralysis. When the daughters of the Orient arrived from the Coast by plane they were put through the usual course of tourist sprouts. The first stop was the conventional top of the Empire State Building, which failed utterly to shatter their Eastern calm. After tossing off an orange juice apiece, they said the only things they really wanted to see in New York were its hospitals and its Chinatown. This bowled us over, as we are not used to such tourists. Why, they acted as though they had never heard of Radio City!

Good Figures, Reward of Work, Regimes of Movie Stars Prove

By Carolyn Abbott.

NO ONE takes beauty casually in Hollywood. It is a life's work. Even if you see a woman who was a star many years ago, you will still be amazed at how she has retained her youth and beauty.

Exercise is the answer to how the actresses keep their youthful figures. In spite of the energetic lives these girls live most of them have a systematic round of exercises each day. Even the very young girls who have no figure problem at all work hard to keep their body contours beautiful.

Priscilla Lane, clever comedienne, has a waistline that measures just 18 inches. This is in perfect proportion to the rest of her figure. She keeps her slimness by doing dozens of bends each morning. She stands with her feet about 12 inches apart and bends from the waist, touching her toe to the opposite foot.

Jean Muir has a regular exercise to keep her legs and thighs streamlined. She places a dining-room chair before her, rests one hand on a high window sill or table, and goes to work. She stretches the leg with toe pointed out over the back of the chair in a rotary movement, back again and in position. She does this a dozen times and then repeats with the other leg.

Bette Davis doesn't like routine exercise, but has her household arranged so there are certain tasks for her to perform each day which bring her muscles into play. Did you ever stop to think of how much beneficial exercise you are getting when you lean over to pick up papers and magazines from the floor or when you climb stairs and ladders or when you hang clothes on a high line?

Margaret Lindsay has developed a beautiful back and arms by rowing a boat. She practices this form of exercise a great deal when the weather is fair and when it is not, she works out on an indoor rowing machine.

Mrs. Barkley at Farm As Husband Is Honored

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Telegraph wires from Washington to Paducah, Ky., buzzed busily yesterday morning shortly after the Capitol Hill caucus resulting in Senator Alben W. Barkley's election to Democratic leadership of the Senate.

Mrs. Barkley, who left Washington a couple of weeks ago to spend some time "back home," had the news and sent a reply within half an hour after the Capital heard of her husband's victory. Chances are she will return for a brief stay in Washington before Congress closes, but right now her time is taken up with looking after improvements on a farm Senator Barkley bought not long ago.

Located about four miles from Paducah, this piece of property boasts a rambling Southern-style house that needs a good deal of doing over, and Mrs. Barkley has her hands full in supervising the work.

Interested but Not Active in Politics

Shortly before she left Washington when the Supreme Court fight reached the hammer-and-tongs stage, Mrs. Barkley, with other wives of Congressman, frequently was seen in the Senate gallery. But even then, she declined to comment on her wishes for the outcome. Although she is tremendously interested in politics, she has refrained through the years from taking any sort of active part in the political scene.

The proverbial Southern wife, in that her career has largely been devoted to homemaking, Mrs. Barkley has given most of her time and attention to her husband, her children and her grandchildren. Of medium height, with sparkling brown eyes, graying hair and an exceptional sense of humor, she is one of the most popular of the "Senate wives" and has entertained frequently at the residence on Cleveland avenue where she and her husband and their son, David Barkley, have lived for some time.

One of her daughters is Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, wife of the recently appointed counsel of the Maritime Commission. Mrs. Truitt, her husband and their three sons—Max, jr., William Barkley and Thomas—will leave next week for Montana Hall, White Post, Va., to visit friends during the month of August.

Another Barkley daughter is Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, who left with her husband not long ago for Naples, Italy, where he was assigned to the post of vice consul. Mrs. MacArthur spent most of the past winter here, while her husband—who, incidentally, is a nephew of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff of the Army—was detailed to the Foreign Service School.

David Barkley, who is connected with the Bureau of Aeronautics, Department of Commerce, and his father, the Senator, are keeping the house on Cleveland avenue open, even though Mrs. Barkley is away.

Noted Dancer Coming to Capital

When the Champlain drops anchor in New York Harbor today, Catherine Littlefield, choreographer and premiere danseuse of the Philadelphia Ballet Co. will be among the notables coming ashore. She is returning from an extensive tour of Europe.

Dispatches from abroad indicate she and her troupe took Europe by storm as few Americans ever have. Dancing 11 times in one week in Paris, they were honored on opening night by having President Lebrun and the United States Ambassador, William C. Bullitt, in their audience. The latter, in a burst of pride, is said to have kissed Miss Littlefield on both cheeks when the performance was finished, while President Lebrun complimented her in glowing terms. Furthermore, King Leopold of Belgium came out of mourning to see her dance in Brussels.

And now Washington notables are to have the privilege of witnessing one of her performances. Shortly after her arrival in New York, she will go to her home city, Philadelphia, to spend a few days. Then, on Wednesday evening, August 4, she will be in the Capital for the international night event, sponsored by the Dancing Masters of America and featuring the Philadelphia Ballet Co. and her.

Diplomats and prominent officials are being invited in large numbers to the affair, which promises to be one of the outstanding occasions on schedule for August. The grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel is to be the scene of the event, with boxes decorated with flags of more than 50 countries, and with representatives from each nation on hand to witness the spectacle.

Debutantes of last season and the coming season will be ushers, according to Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., who is social director for the performance. The program will include entertainment by some of the outstanding stars of stage, screen and radio, and will wind up with a grande finale in which the dancing masters themselves will participate—all for the benefit of social and official Washington.

Premiere Tonight to Draw Many Notables

Speaking of international nights, the one on schedule for this evening will also attract just about every prominent person who is still in the city. The international premiere of "The Road Back," a sequel to Eric Remarque's stirring novel and screen play, "All Quiet on the Western Front," will draw scores of diplomats, Army and Navy officers, Cabinet members, Senators, heads of Government departments and cave-dwellers. Invitations have been accepted by about 300 outstanding residents of Washington, and, doubtlessly, many other persons will be on hand to see the official and social notables go in, with the attendant fanfare of clicking cameras and radio broadcasts . . .

Diplomats Sail Back to Capital

Ambassador de los Rios, the Pittagulas on the Champlain.

Washington diplomats are bounding back over the main again to anchor themselves at their desks for the coming fall and winter season. When the Champlain rolls up the Hudson today with its covey of tugs, those aboard will be the Spanish Ambassador, Fernando de los Rios, and Gustave Pittagula, Secreto the Spanish Embassy and Mrs. Pittagula. Paul Bastide, former French Minister of Commerce and Mrs. Bastide are also aboard—not a bit embarrassed, either, when the steward speaks to them in French.

Everybody seems to be glad of this opportunity to be able to wave a welcome to Ambassador de los Rios, who, it was feared a while back, might not return. He will visit his family on Gibson Island before returning to the city.

Others who come out of the sea in ships today are those on the "Saturnia," including Miss Gladys Swarthout who most likely has been practicing "Santa Lucia" on her way across from Trieste and the Mediterranean; Frank Chapman, and Miss Phyllis Dodson, who have many friends in Washington.

Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada who paid a state visit to President Roosevelt last spring, has embarked on another and more hazardous journey. With eight members of his staff, he has left by train for a trip into the Arctic, the longest journey ever made by the King's personal representative in Canada.

The adventurous Scot will be accompanied as far as Victoria by Lady Tweedsmuir and Mrs. George Pape, her lady-in-waiting, who also visited in Washington last year. The Governor General will desceend from Mackenzie to Aklavik, where the Royal Canadian Air Force will fly the Vice-Regal party to Herschel Island, island outpost of the Yukon territory in the Beaufort Sea. Southward from Aklavik on a 1,700 mile fight the party may stop in the new radium and silver mining country on Great Bear Lake.

Bar Honors WomanHead Of Legal Aid

Miss Clephane Is Invited to Lead Discussion at Kansas City.

Noted Feminine Attorney Started the Bureau Here in 1932.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Beatrice Clephane, part time director of the Legal Aid Bureau, has been invited to lead a panel discusion on the subject before the section on local bar association activities at the convention of the American Bar Association, opening Sept. 27 in Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Clephane, one of the Capital's most prominent women attorneys, has found time to take active part in civic welfare work in addition to carrying on her own law practice. She was responsible for the formation of the Legal Aid Bureau, in 1932, following a conference with Mary Edith Coulson, secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, on the need for such a department. A volunteer group of attorneys established it in the beginning and later it was included in the Community Chest from which it receives an annual appropriation.

As part time director, Miss Clephane handles the administrative work, the cases assigned from out-of-town bureaus and also has special appointments. Each of the 12 attorneys co-operating has one conference hour a week—the hours on weekdays from 2 to 4 o'clock, and on Saturdays from 10 to 12. "I wish people knew the time," remarked Miss Clephane, for they are likely to come at any hour of the day."

Law Students Give Assistance

Law students in the District also give their services as special assistants to the attorneys, doing routine work, investigating cases and helping in trial cases—at the same time gaining valuable experience. Members of Kappa Phi, local legal sorority at Southeastern University, have offered to serve in this capacity during the summer.

Less than a tenth of the cases handled by the bureau go to trial, says Miss Clephane and some require only advice. There is an increasingly large number of domestic relations cases since the passage of the modified divorce law in 1935, giving four reasons for divorce instead of one. Wherever possible, the bureau tries to effect a reconciliation and many times this is actually what the parties involved desire, she says, although they are too proud to admit it to each other.

Since March, the Legal Aid Bureau has been co-operating with the Bar Association of the District which maintains a desk in the clerk's office at Municipal Court. Mr. Dean Hill Stanley, who is chairman of the legal aid committee of the Bar Association is also chairman of the Board of trustees of the Legal Aid Bureau. The offices of the bureau were moved a month ago from 1010 Vermont avenue to 1409 L street northwest.

The staff of attorneys, in addition to Miss Clephane, includes Mr. James B. Hogan, Mrs. Rosalie B. Gerber, Mr. George A. Didden, jr., Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, Mr. Francis W. Taylor, Mr. Allan Fisher, Mrs. Willie N. Gauss, Mr. William T. Hannan, Mr. Charles V. Koons, Mr. Leeonard Spalding, Mr. J. Ambrose Kiley and Mrs. Kathryn Lawlor.

Has Many Other Interests

The Legal Aid Bureau and a private law practice would seem enough to absorb the attention of most persons but Miss Clephane finds time for many other activities as well. She is a past president of the Women's Bar Association of which she was the head for two years, having been succeeded only this May by Judge Annabel Matthews. During her administration the association increased its membership by 100, and the two years saw new opportunities open to women in the legal field. Two women judges were appointed, Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of the Municipal Court, and Judge Marion Harron, of the United States Board of Appeals. The Women's Bar Association favors the appointment of women in such posts only when they have the background and qualification fitting them for the place.

The association also was active in legislative work during her presidency, studying and sponsoring in principle the juvenile court act, the uniform sales bill and the corporation bill. The junior bar section for women under 36 years of age, also was started with an enthusiastic response from the young women attorneys and the women lawyers' room in the courthouse was enlarged and refurnished under the chairmanship of Mrs. Grace Kanode Vickers, secretary to Chief Justice Wheat.

Miss Clephane is also a former grand dean of Kappa Beta Pi legal sorority of which Miss Elizabeth F. Reed is now the head, and was the first woman chairman of the citizens committee, governing body section, two of Chevy Chase. She is also on the finance committee of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority, national social sorority, and its legal counsel.

Professional Women Map Program

Mandate Given for Wide Legislative Policy at Session.

A MANDATE for a broad legislative policy was given to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Atlantic City yesterday by the delegates representing 48 States at the national convention in session there.

The attempt of the California delegation, led by Lily Hawkinson, of Los Angeles, to obtain complete States' rights on legislation was voted down by the convention. Among the first to oppose the plan for independent State action on national legislation without respect to the national legislative program was Miss Mary L. Esarey, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

The discussion of California's plan came in the midst of a report on legislative policy presented by Mrs. Dorothy J. Dunn, of Arlington, Va., chairman of the legislative committee, who is a member of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee.

Miss Williams Favors Set Policy

Miss Charl Ormond Williams, of Washington, president of the National Federation, has advocated the adoption of a real legislative policy by the organization throughout the two years of her administration.

Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., past president of the National Federation, declared that business and professional women have the largest stake in national legislation of any group of women in this country.

Miss Josephine Bell, of Stillwater, Okla., chairman of the National Committee of Education, said that the difference of opinion as to the wisdom of the national legislative policy resolved itself into the question "Does the Federation wish to go forward with an effective national policy along legislative lines to combat discrimination among women?" California stood alone when the final vote was taken.

Another interesting feature of the legislative policy was the authorization of a legislative steering committee. This committee will be appointed by the president for a term of two years after confirmation by the board of directors. This committee shall by a majority vote of the board and the national chairmen of standing committees concerned in the legislation determine federation support of, or opposition to, specific bills which in their judgment embody the principles of the legislative program.

A liberating factor in the federation's legislative plan was the authorization of the delegates to revise the policy adopted at the Chicago biennial in 1933 which will permit the legislative chairman with the consent of the majority of the board of directors to initiate in the name of the national federation such action as may be required to protect or advance the interests involved.

Mrs. Dunn explained that under the procedure adopted in Chicago and repealed at yesterday's session, there was no provision for emergency action on the legislative program.

While the women prepared for the legislative battle for equal rights with men, they also laid plans for gaining greater voice in National, State and local government. Their committee on political techniques told them how to proceed:

1. Study the organization in your precinct or election district. Attend all meetings so that people become accustomed to women being there and take it as a matter of course.

MRS. DOROTHY DUNN,

Complete States' Rights Complete States' rights Defeated.

2. Become acquainted with all the voters you can.
3. Run for election as a member of your party organization in the precinct.
4. Know the needs of your city. Attend meetings of the city council frequently.
5. Become an active member of the political organizations that determine your city government.
6. Know your own form of county government. Attend meetings of the county governing board.
7. Make and seize any opportunity to participate in county government.
8. Keep in mind the possibility of being a delegate to your party's State convention. Service to the party in the district, city and county should result in promotion to the State committee.
9. Keep tab on the votes of your representatives after election. Let them hear from you frequently during the session.
10. Remember: Many a political career of potential usefulness has been cut short by an aggressive "irregularity" on minor questions.

Many Local Members There

Washington club members there for the convention in addition to Miss Williams, Mrs. Dunn, Miss Earlene White, national vice president and candidate for president to succeed Miss Williams, are Miss Nina Kinsella, the president of the local club; Miss Ruth Robinson, past president; Miss Coye Sligh, Miss Elizabeth Mann, Miss Emily Calrk, Miss Mae R. Murray, a former president of the Washington club; Miss Catherine M. O'Donnell, Miss Lucetta Stockbridge, Miss Esther Colvin, Miss Callie Waldron, secretary to Miss Williams; Miss Clara Beetle, Miss Nannie Sanders, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Judge Lucy S. Howorth, Miss Florence Enos, Miss Penelope Cobb, Mrs. Opal David and Miss Emily Knuebuhl, Miss Elizabeth Apperson, delegate from the Alexandria club, also is there for the week.

Others from Washington who expect to go tomorrow for the closing banquet of the convention are Miss Alice Webster, Miss Vera Lundquist, Mrs. Blanche Morgan Foote, Miss Jane Hammond, Miss Martha E. Edwards and Mrs. Marie D. Werner.

Women Try To Pay Off Debt by 1940

Have $12,000 Toward Wiping Out $50,000 Spent on Aged.

Mrs. Harry Hoskinson Heads Lady Managers in Drive.

The board of lady managers of the Methodist Home for the Aged hopes to celebrate its golden anniversary in 1940 by wiping out the $50,000 debt on the home. Since May of this year, $12,000 has been raised toward this goal.

Mrs. Harry Hoskinson is chairman of the board, which includes from 2 to 30 members from each of the Methodist churches in the District Conference. These include not only churches in Washington but also those in the territory from the District line to Herndon, Va., and to Laurel, Md. There are 300 women on the board, which meets the first Thursday of each month from October to July.

With the board's meeting season over, Mrs. Hoskinson is spending the remainder of the season at her summer home in Germantown, Md. It is not all a vacation, however, for she is busy making plans for the year ahead. She has been an active member of the board for 22 years and its president for the last nine. She succeeded in the presidency Mrs. Fred S. Cawson, one of four charter members and still one of the most active women in the group.

Other charter members, Mrs. G. Z. Colison, Mrs. S. H. Walker and Mrs. J. M. Black, also maintain their interest in the work and attend meetings whenever possible.

The home was established at the suggestion of Dr. Job Price, a former Methodist minister who visited one of his parishioners in an almshouse and decided the churches of his denomination ought to care for their own aged members.

Eleven years ago the present home was built at Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street, situated on a 4-acre tract. It has 60 bedrooms and large, attractive parlors and lounges. The building has only two floors, to reduce the need for stairways. Both men and women are residents of the home and married couples share double rooms. There are at present 45 members of the home family.

In addition to the goal of paying off the indebtedness on the building the board of lady managers aids in raising the $22,000 annual budget for current expenses. Contributions are made by individuals and by the separate churches in the conference. Bequests have also aided substantially.

Twice a year, the Wednesday following Mother's Day each May and the Friday after Thanksgiving in November, donation days are held. The May party is always a fete including a tea in the afternoon and a program in the evening, when guests bring donations for the home such as linens and canned goods. At the Thanksgiving season there is no entertainment, but only a day for donations to be received.

Meetings of the board are conducted at the home and the members take a personal interest in the residents and their comfort and happiness.

THE DEMOCRATIC WOMEN'S NATIONAL COUNCIL, of which Mrs. Harry A. Dodderidge is president, will sponsor a moonlight cruise on the Potomac Wednesday, August 4. MR. AND MRS. JOHN A. HUSTON of 616 Upshur street, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Monday with a picnic at their summer cottage on West River, Avalon Shores, Md., and their friends still are talking about what a great party it was.

The sunshine committee of Bethany Chapter, O. E. S., of which Mrs. Huston is a past matron, presented them with a clock as a gift and also served the dinner and supper on the porch of the cottage.

The entertainment was entirely informal, with games and contests as features. There was a cracker-eating contest in which Martha Kauffman defeated the entire field; a sack race for the feminine guests in which Mabel Test, a past matron, won first place and a similar race for the men, won by William Alf. Leap frog was another popular game, but if there were any winners they weren't announced.

The Huston's nearly always entertain a group of friends at their cottage on their anniversary, but the occasion this season was a special one because it marked their golden wedding day. They were married in Terre Haute, Ind., July 19, 1887. For some years Mr. Huston was a proof reader in the State printing office at Indianapolis. In March, 1898, he received an appointment as proof reader in the Government Printing Office here, a post from which he retired June 1, 1932 after 34 years of service.

The Huston residence on Upshur street is occupied by Robert C. Huston and his family, while his parents spend their winters in Florida and their summers at Avalon Shores.

MRS. WALTER B. FRY, president of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. C. D. Lowe, accompanied Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, director of the Tuberculosis Association, to Bald Eagle Camp yesterday to have luncheon and inspect the camp. Four have been sent by the parent-teacher organization this season and the District Congress also gave $10 a short time ago for the purchase of toys.

Mrs. Fry, with her husband and younger son, Carl, a former student at the University of North Carolina and now in Baltimore, leaves Sunday for a two-week motor trip.

The itinerary sounds as though they might be gone at least a month, but they plan to do it all in a fortnight. They go first to Cleveland, where they may make a lake trip, then on to St. Louis to spend a day or two with Mrs. Fry's mother, Mrs. Christine Reinhardt; down to Memphis, Tenn., on to Asheville, N. C., and to the Cherokee Indian Reservation, where they will make a short stay, then back to Chapel Hill, where Carl will look up some of his friends, and from there back to Washington.

The Indian reservation is one of their most interesting objectives as Mr. Fry was for 37 years in the Indian Service and still purchases all Indian supplies as director of purchase for the Department of the Interior, a position he has held for the past five years.

Accused of threatening the lives of Mrs. Nellie J. Hanford and her son, S. J. Hanford, of 3706 Military road northwest, unless he was paid $1,000 in small banknotes, Earle William Gott, no fixed address, was indicted for extortion by the District grand jury yesterday. He is in jail in default of $10,000 bond.

The threat, contained in a letter received by Mrs. Hanford June 21, resulted in a search by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, who asked Mrs. Hanford to send a decoy package as directed to the doorman of the Ambassador Hotel. HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Opposing Southern Forces Tighten Lines After First Skirmish In 'Third Battle' of Manassas; Verbal Clash May Last All Year

Daughters of Confederacy Insist on Developing Site as Shrine.

On the historic battlefield of first and second Manassas opposing forces yesterday tightened their lines for a third skirmish, which may last well into the winter.

Although there was no ill feeling in the word contest which marked celebration of the seventy-sixth anniversary of the first battle on the site, neither was there any indication of surrender or retreat.

Standing on a wooden platform not far from the spot where Col. Thomas J. Jackson won his title of "stonewall" in 1861, Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, yesterday said that Manassas battlefield should be deeded to the Federal Government for restoration and development.

He voiced the opinion of the National Park Service, which at one time was eager to spend $1,000,000 in the area, and of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Opposed by U. D. C.

But not of the United Daughters of the Confederacy!

Mrs. Henry G. Cly, of the Stonewall Jackson Chapter of the U. D. C., speaking as a representative of the Southern Memorial Association, declared that Southern women should be offered at least the chance to refuse charge of the field and its development.

"We have finished the work at Stratford. We gave $50,000 there and we already have $1,000 for a museum here. I feel sure we could do it and I know we should be offered the chance."

"Give it to the Daughters!" punctured the air at regular intervals while Senator Rust and other speakers were explaining that they believed the project too big for any one association. Numerous U. D. C. members joined in the interruptions and the cheering was unanimous as far as the feminine part of the audience was concerned.

Appeals as Democrat.

Senator Rust assured the women that he would never be willing to deed the field to the Government without restrictions specifying that the site remain forever Southern. He appealed to them in the name of the Democratic Party.

"The Republicans never would have made us the offer, but this aid is extended to us while a Democrat is in the White House."

His eyes surveyed the hilltop from which McDowell's men were sent on the run back to Washington 76 years ago, and envisioned the monuments that should be put up to honor the victorious Confederates. He saw only 129 undeveloped acres "looking no better than they did 30 years ago."

To make it worse, he could see 1,500 acres the National Park Service has bought up all around Henry Hill. Already 62 markers have been ordered for the 1,500 acres, and there are plans for driveways and landscaping. If everything works out all right, N. P. S. may be willing to purchase 6,000 to 7,000 more acres—for the Manassas battles covered many a field and stretched along Bull Run for considerable distance.

Post Staff Photo.

At the "third battle of Manassas" yesterday, Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, of Tennessee; Robert B. Cushing, a Confederate soldier who missed the first two battles, and State Senator J. W. Rust.

Jackson Boast Recalled.

But "the South" still holds the most hallowed ground and that is the 129 acres that make up Henry Hill. Manassas is the last big Virginia battlefield not being restored and developed. It is one of the fields dearest to Southerners, for it was the scene of two victories—one of them marked by the running Federal retreat.

Stonewall Jackson asked for 10,000 fresh men after the first Manassas battle, and said he could go straight into Washington. Almost everybody now agrees with him, but the Confederate generals in charge at that time "held a conference" and thought it best to wait.

Senator Rust, who has been president of the Manassas Memorial Battlefield Association for eight years, said after the meeting that he had "no move in mind."

It was thought that the U. D. C. forces would rally for the next "fray" and possibly throw the weight of their entire organization behind their offer. If they insist on taking over development of the 129 acres, the Sons of the Confederacy apparently will not carry the battle to the animosity stage.

One Veteran Present.

Only one Confederate soldier was in attendance at the celebration. He was Robert B. Cushing, who did not enter the war until 1863 and now is the only veteran in Prince William County. The 90-year-old former soldier said he would like to see the battlefield "fixed up," but that he does not want any more battles.

Elton O. Pillow, past division commander of the Maryland and District of Columbia Division of the Sons of the Confederate Veterans, said that his division had voted to oppose turning over the park to anybody "without restrictions." If Senator Rust can make good his assurances that the field would remain a Confederate battle ground, the decision might be reversed, he said.

Dr. S. F. Johnson, president of the Lee Highway Association, who assisted the National Park Service in drawing up plans for the restoration project, said he felt that it would be a tragedy to miss the chance to have the site developed "just because of some hard feeling that has no basis."

He said he had complete faith in the Government's ability to develop the park "as it should be done" and that he hoped to see 9,500 acres within the park's boundaries.

Maj. Joseph Mills Hanson, historical expert with National Park Service, said that because of its great historic interest he trusted the whole area would come into the military park.

Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, of Tennessee, made the principal speech of the day. He spoke of the important place Manassas has in American history and praised the heroes of the Confederacy.

The celebration lasted most of the day. Lunch was spread on the grounds, and approximately 300 were in attendance.

Report Urges WideExtension In Merit System

Civil Service Examiners Need Technical Aid, Chapter Asserts.

Asserting "no effort is made to repeat the familiar arguments in favor of the merit system and the career service, as opposed to the spoils system and rotation in office," the Brookings Institution yesterday recommended the merit system be extended to the bulk of Federal employes not now under it, "in the interests of economy and efficiency."

The institution's recommendation was the tenth chapter of a report to a special Congressional committee headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

The Byrd committee, which was set up to study reorganization of Federal executive agencies, enlisted the aid of the Brookings Institution, a private research agency. Other chapters of the report have been made public from time to time.

Dealing with the public personnel problem, the current chapter recommended that the Civil Service Commission enlist the co-operation of the Government's scientific, technical and professional bureaus in giving and grading examinations in their respective fields, at least until such time as it can "greatly strengthen its own examining corps.

Commenting on existing conditions, the report stated:

"The size of the National Government and the diversity of its scientific and technical work is such that in the operating agencies are specialists in particular aspects of sciences and their application who are far more competent in their specialties than the Civil Service examiners."

The institution's report also recommended the appointment of a "well-qualified" officer for each Government agency.

Another recommendation favored statutory recognition of the existing personnel council, made up of representatives of the various departments and the Civil Service Commission.

Mrs. Campbell's Release Papers Mixup Grows

Accused Abductor Still in Jail; Statements of Judge, Lawyer Conflict.

Mrs. Marion W. Campbell, Washington art teacher accused of abducting 20-month-old Philip Shane, was still in jail at Hyattsville last night as new mysteries were added to the strange case. She was arrested Monday night, an hour after the boy was taken.

Judge George S. Phillips, of Berwyn, stated last night release papers for the 40-year-old childless woman had been issued at 12:30 p. m. yesterday at the request of her lawyer, John S. White.

White, however, said no release papers had been issued. He explained he was waiting for a telegram from the woman's husband in New York before acting.

Judge Phillips said he fixed bond at $500 each on two charges, $500 for driving while intoxicated and $500 for abduction. The judge stated White appeared before him with a bondsman, Frank Mace, and that bond was furnished by the bondsman.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Shane said she believed Mrs. Campbell was suffering with a "mother complex." Mrs. Campbell was apprehended after a chase following her seizure of the little boy while he played in the street near the Shane home near Beltsville, Md.

Mrs. Campbell, a teacher for 14 years in the District, is accused of talking to the youngster, then whisking him away in her car to nearby Berwyn, where she was stopped.

Suffering with nervous disorders, Mrs. Campbell was on a year's leave of absence from school work, to recuperate, according to Supt. Ballou. She will be required to prive herself cured before readmission to her former duties, he said.

M. A. Sherwood Funeral Rites Set for Today

Services will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street, for Morgan A. Sherwood, 85, veteran stage manager, who died here Monday. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Sherwood was stage manager and scenery designer at the National Theater until eight years ago. In this capacity he became well acquainted with stage celebrities of several generations. Among his friends were John Drew, the Barrymores, Robert Mantell and Joseph Jefferson, star of "Lightnin'."

Richard Mansfield presented him with one of his most prized possessions, a chair which the matinee idol had purchased in England.

"The Shack," Mr. Sherwood's place at Four-Mile Run, Va., was the scene of many hunting parties attended by stage notables.

His theatrical career, which began at the old Albaugh's Opera House, included the writing of two plays, which were produced, according to relatives. As stage manager, he had charge of final rehearsals of many shows which opened here, including several Ziegfeld productions.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mr. Sherwood's home was at 3754 Jenifer street. He died of a heart attack while visiting his niece, Mrs. Annie Ramford, 5409 Illinois avenue.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. John R. Kirkwood, and granddaughter, Mrs. Milton C. White. His wife was the late Mrs. Maria S. Sherwood.

By Bob Burns.

A lot'ta people can't understand why in the world it takes eight or ten weeks to make a picture that only runs for a little over an hour. The main reason for this is because they have'ta take a lot more pictures than they can actually use so they can have somethin' to cut out. A person should always have a surplus so he'll have somethin' to draw from in case he gets stuck.

It's like an uncle who was haulin' a wagon load of sand one day and he was going across Mosquito Bog and the wagon got bogged down. My uncle looked around and found out that all of his sand had sifted through the bed of the wagon. He says, "Well, I declare! Here I am stuck in the mud and nothin' to unload!"

Changes.

Secretary Ickes has approved the appointment of regional directors who will co-ordinate the field work of the National Park Service. Carl P. Russell, chief of the wildlife division of the service, will be in charge of Region 1, with field headquarters at Richmond. Thomas J. Allen, jr., superintendent of Rocky Mountain National Park, Colo., will direct Region 2, with field headquarters at Omaha, Nebr. There has been no appointment to Region 3, but Herbert Maier, now in charge of the Park Service's CCC and emergency activities of Region 3, will be acting regional director. He will continue his field office at Oklahoma City, temporarily, at least.

Region 4 will be headed by Frank A. Kittredge, chief engineer of the park service, with his field headquarters continuing at San Francisco. Oliver G. Taylor, deputy chief engineer with headquarters in Washington, succeeds Kittredge as chief engineer. He will continue his headquarters in Washington. David H. Canfield, superintendent, Crater Lake National Park, Oreg., succeeds Superintendent Allen at Rocky Mountain National Park. Superintendent Ernest P. Leavitt, of Lassen Volcanic National Park, Calif., succeeds Canfield at Crater Lake. John C. Preston, now assistant superintendent, Rocky Mountain National Park, assumes the superintendency of Lassen Park.

Visitors.

The glad hand of the N. F. F. E.'s national office has been extended recently to many out-of-town members, including John C. Babcock, Bath, Maine; Frank B. Lessman, San Francisco; George Driesbach, Philadelphia; Fred W. Raper, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Melvin M. Jones, detroit; Alex Himmelman, Milwaukee, and John B. Gehman, Allentown, Pa.

Missing.

The beautiful belt with the proud silver buckle that was won for years with so much pride by Representative Jim O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana. The Representative was on that junket recently to Norfolk, in the care of Representative Norman Hamilton (Democrat), of Virginia. The party saw the navy yards and other sights of the Virginia seashore country. The belt became missing, toward the last. A friend of the Representative remembers the belt as a thing of startling beauty, as beauty in belts goes, and mentioned its hand-beaten leather and hand-hammered silver buckle.

Difficulties.

Now comes the Social Security Board Union, of Baltimore, with tidings that its path to the National Labor Relations Board—for a contest of those dismissal cases— is obstructed, if not obstructed, then less clear. The cases involve the dismissals of several S. S. B. union leaders for alleged union activity, have produced a lengthy row that seemed on the road to a settlement before the NLRB. But now, according to latest word from the union:

"The board now refuses to ask the NLRB to hear the cases, but will simply state to the NLRB that it has not objections to the NLRB's hearing the cases. Because Government employes are specifically excluded from the provisions of the act setting up the NLRB, and because the NLRB will hear only those cases having to do with anti-unionism in the Government service, upon the request of both parties, the union and the administrative agency involved, the Social Security Board Union of Baltimore feels that the Social Security Board's refusal to abide by its agreement to petition the NLRB jointly with the union, is a deliberate attempt to keep these cases from the National Labor Relations Board.

"The board has referred the union back to Mr. Fay, chief of operations of the Baltimore office of the Social Security Board, in the cases of Harold Hochman and David Schutzberger. Mr. Fay is to hold a hearing on these cases sometime next week. The union does not look forward with any sort of hope of a favorable and just decision from this hearing, inasmuch as Mr. Fay has already passed on these dismissals."

Hearing Set Tomorrow on Airport Site

Subcommittee to Consider Navy's Objection to Camp Springs.

Delaney Pledges Quick Action; Ben King to Testify.

The first congressional hearing on the proposed Camp Springs Airport will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. before the subcommittee on aeronautics of the House Naval Affairs Committee. Representative John J. Delaney, chairman of the subcommittee, said yesterday he had no fixed opinion as yet on the advisability of building a commercial air terminal at the Camp Springs site.

"I haven't made any investigation," he declared. "My mind is still open on the subject."

The hearing was arranged to consider the Navy's objection to the Camp Springs site, which was presented to the Naval Affairs Committee in a letter from Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, three days ago. An airport so close to the Navy's new radio receiving station at Cheltenham, Md., Admiral Leady said, would interfere with message reception, and the 300-foot towers, which the Navy may erect would be a serious menace to air traffic.

Stating that he believed the need for an airport here was urgent, Delaney indicated his committee would act with all possible haste. "At the same time," he declared, "the matter is too important to be passed upon without giving those concerned a chance to express their views."

Questions Navy's Objection.

Ben King, sportsman pilot, who has favored an airport at Camp Springs for the last ten years, stated last night he had been invited to appear and testify before the committee. King indicated he believed the proposed terminal would interfere in no way with the Navy's receiving station, on which $1,000,000 already has been spent.

Those in favor of the Camp Springs site, however, made no secret of the fact that the Navy's action is liable to delay or possibly prevent the enactment of legislation at the present session.

The District Airport Commission, under the chairmanship of Senator William H. King, of Utah, is divided on the question, and Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, has prepared a bill of his own, calling for the improvement of Washington Airport with funds provided by District taxpayers.

Draw New Regulations.

As a result of the action taken by the Airline Pilots Association, which threatened to boycott the present landing field unless conditions were improved and regulations made more stringent, officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce have been preparing a new set of instructions for airlines using the airport. The new restrictions, which will have the effect of law, will prohibit the use of the field, under certain adverse conditions of wind direction and velocity. Airplanes which are too large in size and which have exceptionally high landing speed will not be permitted to use the field under provisions of the new rules, Bureau of Aeronautics officials have indicated.

Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, said last night that he was aware that a hearing was to be held on the Camp Springs site, but indicated he would not appear before the subcommittee unless he was ordered to do so.

Opposition of Arlington County leaders to the removal of Military road has been counteracted in part by the offer of $25,000 toward the construction of a new road skirting the field by the airport owners. Representative Howard W. Smith, chief Congressional opponent of the charge, indicated Tuesday he had no objection to the removal of the road if another highway was provided to serve the residents of Arlington County. "I am ready to go along with anything the Arlington County officials decide to do," Representative Smith said.

Welfare Director Finds Relief Need Here Is 'Pathetic'

Certification to WPA projects solves only part of the problem presented by the District workless employables, Miss Alice Hill, director of the Board of Public Welfare's public assistance division reported yesterday.

Her report of a survey of employables in the District pointed out that $30,000, made available for relief April 7, was exhausted before the middle of June. From April 7 to June 25, when a temporary program was in operation, 3,133 applications for relief were received from employable persons. Of these, 1,720 were accepted for investigation.

Miss Hill said her survey showed "the pathetic need of many persons for either work relief, temporary care or intensive case treatment."

D. C. Man Beaten And Robbed of $50

Joseph Houranko, 39, of 216 C street northwest, was beaten and robbed last night while walking along the B. & O. Railroad tracks in Silver Spring, he told police.

Houranko, a World War veteran, said he was walking with a stranger from New York about 9 o'clock when the man attacked him with a blackjack and took $50 in cash.

Houranko was treated by Dr. H. H. Howlett, for severe lacerations of the scalp.

Live Snakes for Roosevelt, Giant's Robe for Museum Brought From Mexico to Capital by Trailer-Explorers

Smithsonian Amazed at Discovery of 6½-Foot Mummies in Caves.

Race May Date to 10,000 B. C.; Zoo Offers New Reptile Home.

Paxson C. Hayes and Gerald C. Barnes are not only two of the few people in the world who are in favor of snakes; they are also the only scientists who have found traces of an extant race of Mexican giants.

With several dozen snakes (all alive), and the burial robe of a prehistoric giant (quite dead), packed in their trailer, they stopped off in Washington yesterday to promote interest in their two unique fields of activity.

Herpetologically speaking, their purpose in coming here from California was to present President Roosevelt with 15 smoki snakes, 10 California and Mexican rattlers and an 8-foot baby Mexican boa constrictor, which was shedding.

Marvin C. McIntyre received them at the White House, expressed the President's gratitude and suggested the reptile house at the zoo as perhaps the best place for the snakes.

Welcomed at Zoo.

Dr. Ernest P. Walker, assistant director of the Zoo, officially welcomed the snakes to their new home.

That over, the visitors dropped in at the Smithsonian Institution with the prehistoric burial robe and a four-legged stool, both of which they unearthed in a burial cave in northern Sonora, Mexico.

Smithsonian officials agreed Hayes and Barnes had something there, but weren't sure what it was. The Californians explained that the cave, one of 18 they had discovered, contains well-preserved mummies of a race which averaged over 6½ feet in height.

High Culture Indicated by Weave of Cloth, Assert Archeologists.

Nobody has discovered them until now, he explains, because of the fact that they are located "100 miles from the end of the last road."

May Be 12,000 Years Old.

He has tried unsuccessfully to learn more about the extinct race from scientists all over the West Coast, and so was not surprised when the Smithsonian didn't know anything about it either. Archeologists who have examined the burial robe agree that the civilization may be anywhere from 1,200 to 12,000 years old, Hayes says. They deduce from the quality of the weave and the dye that the race had reached a high degree of culture.

Between expeditions to Mexico, Hayes and Barnes concentrate on building up good-will toward snakes—the harmless ones, that is. A non-poisonous snake, they estimate, is worth $30 to farmers for the good it does in killing rats and gophers, which each year destroy $9,000,000 in crops on the West Coast alone.

By lecturing in schools and colleges on the value of snakes and the means of distinguishing between good and bad ones, they hope to prevent people from killing the useful reptiles.

Their interest in snakes is purely negative. They brought the rattlers here, just as they are collecting Eastern copperheads to take back to the San Diego zoo, so that everyone will become familiar with the kind of snakes it is proper to kill.

House Group For D.C. Ends Toil for Year

Committee Will Hold No More Regular Meetings This Session.

Amendment Making 3 Changes in Liquor Law Favored.

The House District Committee practically completed its labors yesterday for the current session after reporting favorably on an omnibus bill amending the local liquor control act.

Chairman Palmisano said no more weekly meetings will be held this year, but special sessions will be called if urgent legislation is necessary, or when sub-committees are ready to report on bills.

There now are four District measures on the House calendar, and these are scheduled to be disposed of on Monday, which may be the last District day of the session.

These bills are the twice defeated emergency loan authorization, barber regulation, child adoption reform and the liquor law amendments just approved.

Bills Consolidated.

The latter measure is a consolidation of three bils reported by a subcommittee.

It permits the sale of liquor, as well as beer and wine, at licensed lunch counters; allows appeals from Alcoholic Beverage Control Board rulings to the District Court, and attempts to outlaw the importation of spirits into the District for private consumption without payment of the local tax.

The A. B. C. Board opposed the lunch-counter sale amendment, but it was indorsed by the Bartenders' Union on the ground that it enables the laborer to get service similar to that offered by hotels and clubs.

Enforcement Impossible.

The third amendment seeks to halt the flow of tax-free liquor into the District, chiefly from New York. It prohibits the importation of more than one gallon of liquor or wines under penalty of fine or imprisonment.

A. B. C. Board members insist that it cannot be enforced if enacted, as it would require the searching of automobiles, as was done in the prohibition era.

A hearing was scheduled for 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning by a sub-committee on bills which seek to restore to duty four dismissed policemen. They are James F. Day, David I. Thompson, Ralph S. Warner and Emmett B. Cole.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, is chairman of the sub-committee. Other members are Representatives Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Insect Pests Invade Virginia and Maryland

The Department of Agriculture reported yesterday that insect pests invaded Virginia on schedule last month.

Bad army worm outbreaks were reported in Virginia, Maryland and Delaware. Heavy outbreaks of the tobacco flea beetle were reported from the Piedmont section of Virginia and North Carolina, southward to Florida and westward to Tennessee.

Plan to Exclude Colored in Area Meets Protest

Lincoln Association Seeks Admission to St. Mary's Project.

An organization to protest "banishment of Negro citizens" from the area known as "Foggy Bottom" was effected last night at a meeting of the Lincoln Citizens Association held in the Liberty Baptist Church, Twenty-third and E streets northwest.

Communications from the Alley Dwelling Authority were read, indicating that the Authority had begun construction of new apartment houses on the St. Mary's Court site. It was originally intended that these apartments would be occupied by colored families. Objections to the Authority against such occupancy forced the matter to be held in abeyance pending hearings.

The Authority summed up objections as follows:

"Negro occupancy would hinder development of the West End.

"There is a great need for additional housing in the area for Government employes.

"Additional housing is needed for white students and others who find it advantageous to be near the center of the city.

"Negroes have no such reasons for living in the neighborhood.

"Loans for white apartments will be made more difficult to secure if the Authority accepts Negroes as tenants for the new buildings.

"Opening of the apartments to colored tenants will tend to make permanent the Negro population in the West End."

A committee consisting of E. F. Harris, the Rev. T. W. Alstorks, the Rev. Hampton T. Gaskins, Dr. Henry Heath, William I. Lee and Mary Mason Jones, was named to appear at a hearing.

Edward F. Harris presided.

Victor H. Buell, 32, Dies of Pneumonia

Victor Herbert Buell, 32, 1715 Irving street northest, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital of pneumonia.

Buell had been a resident of Washington for 17 years. He was employed by the District Highway Department for some time, and a month before his death joined the staff at the Georgetown Playground. Born in Pueblo, Colo., he was a graduate of McKinley High School here, and a former member of the DeMolay order.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Ellen Buell, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Buell, of Washington. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 10 a. m. in the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Arlington National cemetery.

Ezekiel Tells Federal Unions Not to Cry 'Wolf' at U.S. Doors

Wallace Aide Advises Group Now Championing Ousted Employe to Use Tact in Appeals.

Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to Secretary Wallace, last night counseled the unions of Government personnel not to cry "Wolf, Wolf" at the doors of officialdom every time a petty complaint arises.

Speaking at a meeting of Agriculture Lodge, No. 2, United Federal Workers of America—a C. I. O. unit—Ezekiel warned that such unions may later find it difficult to get the ear of the Secretary. His words went directly to the group which currently is asking that Wallace personally adjust the squabble over Louis Matosoff, dropped from the Department of Agriculture for alleged union activity.

"Ability to pick the important from the unimportant is just as essential to the reputation of a union head as to that of a Government executive," he said. "It is important that union officials conduct negotiations with judgment and tact. They must learn to see matters from the point of view of the administrator, so that they can understand his side of the problem as well as the employes."

The unions must use discretion, he said, in choosing the cases they select to follow through, and appeal only matters in which some real injustice has been done.

"Members of unions can not be given preferential treatment over other Federal employes merely because they are mmebers of unions; all that the union can ask for them is a square deal," he told the lodge.

He said that when public employes organize labor unions, "they are in the dual position of workers for Government and responsible functionaries of Government. If they are not to injure the cause of workers generally, and the respect in which labor unions are held, they must be exceedingly scrupulous of how they use the power that organization gives them."

In awarding a charter to the lodge, Jacob Baker, provisional president of the U. F. W. A., predicted rapid development for the organization. Representative R. G. Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, called the unionization of Government personnel "a splendid thing," but urged against strikes in the service.

D. C. Girl Seized In Vice Cleanup; Hearing Is Today

The twenty-sixth person—a Washington girl—to be taken by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in their recent cleanup of vice conditions in Baltimore and vicinity will be given a hearing before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen in Baltimore today.

Another Washington girl was arrested during the drive and will be given a hearing at an early date. The two, Helen Burness and Billie Edwards, gave their address as the 1600 block of Columbia road northwest. Both were released on $1,500 bond after pleading not guilty.

Miss Burness was arrested here Tuesday at an undisclosed address, and Miss Edwards was arrested in Portsmouth, N. H. In a secret indictment returned July 6 by the Federal grand jury in Baltimore, Miss Burness was charged with transporting from Washington to Baltimore for immoral purposes Caroline St. John, a key witness for the Government in the roundup.

Capt. Frederick T. Murphy, 54, United States Army, retired, died at San Diego, Calif., Monday, it was announced yesterday by the War Department. A graduate of the Cavalry School basic course, Capt. Murphy entered the military service as a first lieutenant, Infantrty Section, Officers' Reserve Corps, in 1917.

Policeman Quits Rather Than 'Fix' Up Traffic Ticket

Officer Bernard Hysan, of the Mount Rainier (Md.) police, has turned in his badge and other effects rather than "take care of" a traffic ticket at the request of Mayor Norman A. Pruitt, but some doubt existed last night whether his "resignation" would become effective.

Hysan must submit a resignation in writing to the mayor and the town council, and no member of the council reached for comment would predict what action the governing body would take.

Mayor Pruitt, meanwhile, admitted he had asked Hysan to take care of the ticket. He said:

"The story is true. I think Hysan was sick or off his base or something. My people in this community know what happened."

The traffic ticket, it was learned, was not issued against a member of the council but against a councilman's friend. The councilman first asked Hysan to take care of it and when the policeman refused, turned to the mayor for aid.

When Hysan once more said "no," Mayor Pruitt is said to have demanded more "co-operation" from the police force, whereupon Hysan turned in his badge.

Firm to Ignore Warning, Try to Build Abattoir

Gobel Attorney Defies Threat to Invoke Pollution Act.

The Adolf Gobel Co. will not be dissuaded from building an abattoir in Washington by veiled threats to invoke the District's 39-year-old stream pollution law, a spokesman for the New York packing house said yesterday.

D. Edward Clarke, of the firm's legal counsel, replied thus to a warning sounded by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, leader of the drive to prevent erection of a slaughterhouse at Benning and Anacostia roads northeast.

"Such gestures as Mr. Seal is making in an attempt to halt this project are not being taken seriously by us," Clarke said. "We have ample laws to protect us. If the plant can't be operated without being a nuisance, it can be stopped. But the company knows that it can conduct an abattoir without its being a nuisance."

Washington is becoming a laughingstock in other cities, Clarke said, as a result of the campaign—so far ineffective—to keep the Gobel company from rebuilding on the old abatioir site and resuming business here.

The attorney, who argued the company's case before Senate and House committees which conducted hearings on "nuisance industry" legislation, admitted, however, that construction operations have not yet been started. He said he did not know what is causing the delay.

Last Thursday, the House District Committee was informed that work would be started this week. On the previous day, the committee had tabled a bill which would have prevented the company from executing its plans for a slaughterhouse.

Lodge Outing Sunday.

The first outing of Benjamin Franklin Lodge, F. A. A. M., will be held Sunday at Morgantown, Md. Members of the committee include Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, Sam Bauman, Allan B. Baker, Milton Mervis, Mitchell Stein, Morris Rosen, Clem Nausbaum, Michael

3 Suits Ask $45,000 For Auto Mishaps

Three suits, asking total damages of $45,000 were filed in District Court yesterday as a result of traffic mishaps.

Frederick P. Peach, 1735 Connecticut avenue northwest, demanded damages of $25,000 and a passenger in his car, Henrietta O'Shea, 1923 G street northwest, sought $10,000.

Through attorney Albert E. Conradis, Peach asserted he was driving his car at Nineteenth and F streets nortwest when a General Taxicab Association, Inc., cab owned by Charles Hutman, crashed into it. The accident happened April 3, 1937.

The third suit was filed by Ella G. Cook, 1016 South Carolina avenue southeast, who claimed she was seriously hurt when an automobile driven by Porter G. Rowzee, 4120 Fourteenth street northwest, struck her at Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, April 23 last. Attorney James P. Donovan filed the suit, which asked damages of $10,000.

New Films Will Dominate Next Week's Screens

Varied Bills With Famous Stars Promise Unusual Amusement Values.

"Saratoga," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production in which Jean Harlow makes her last appearance, with Clark Gable co-starred, will be the screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Others of importance in this exciting story of the racetracks and its followers include Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan, Una Merkel, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, Hattie McDaniels and a long list of supporting players. Red Skelton, ebullient comedian and master of ceremonies is being held for a third week to preside over a vaudeville bill which also will embrace Gus Van, formerly of the team of Van and Schenck; Dorothy Crooker, the team of Carter and Holmes, "with funny sayings and stuff," and the Gae Foster Girls.

Warren William, Mady Correll and 4-year-old Kitty Clancy are the featured players in "Midnight Madonna," announced as chief feature of the screen portion of the bill at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story of the play has much of its background in the courts of our large cities and centers in the battle between a father and mother for custody of their child. As a novelty headline attraction the vaudeville bill will present Ruth Hughes Aarons and Victor Barna, table tennis champions, in a demonstration of skill in the popular game.

Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold and Ray Millard will be seen in the leading roles of "Easy Living," the screen feature which comes to the Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Others in the cast of this amusing comedy include Luis Alberni and Mary Nash. The piece was written by Preston Sturges. As an extra added attraction, there will be shown "Walt Disney's Academy Award Revue," a symposium of the foremost of the "Silly Symphonies" released during the past year.

Opening with an elaborate Washington premiere showing tonight at 8:45, "The Road Back" will be the major screen offering at the RKO-Keith Theater. In this Universal sequel to Erich Maria Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front," the careers of the boys just out of the front-line trenches will be traced as they attempt to adjust themselves to the vastly altered requirements of peace. The action of the drama begins with the signing of the armistice. In the cast are John King and Barbara Read in the romantic leads; "Slim" Summerville, Andy Devine, Louise Fazenda, Noah Beery, jr., Lionel Atwill, Spring Byington, Frank Reicher, Laura Hope Crews and many other players of the first rank.

Dick Powell, in "The Singing Marine," will resume his downtown run at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow and continuing throughout the week. In this musicalized romance of the United States Marine Corps, the star is supported by Doris Weston, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Lee Dixon and a host of others. The songs were written by Warren and Dubin, and all are hits.

"The Emperor's Candlesticks," costarring William Powell and Luise Rainer, after a successful week at Loew's Capitol, will move down the street to Loew's Columbia Theater as chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow. Supporting roles in this story of international intrigue and romance are played by Henry Stephenson, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan and Frank Morgan.

The latest release of "The March of Time," dealing with three subjects of timely interest, will comprise the chief feature of the bill of short subjects announced for the week beginning tomorrow by the Trans-Lux Theater. Other features of note will be "Anitra's Dance," a novelty, and "Mickey's Elephant," a Disney cartoon comedy.

"Elephant Boy," the Alexander Korda production starring Sabu, the 12-year-old East Indian boy, has scored so emphatic a success at the Rialto Theater that it will be continued as chief feature of the bill at the Ninth street house. In this engrossing story of the Indian jungles a huge elephant is one of the star performers.

"Fury," first of the recent pictures laying stress on the ability of Spencer Tracy as one of the cinema's foremost actors, will be revived for the week beginning Sunday at the Little Theater. Sylvia Sidney is cast in the principal feminine role in this story of rebellion against lynch law.

At the Roadside Theater next week, beginning Monday night at 8:40, the play to be presented for an engagement of two weeks will be "In Mizzoura," the Augustus Thomas drama that served as a starring vehicle for the late Nat Goodwin.

The sixth Festival Program sponsored by the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks, announced for next Tuesday night at the National Sylvan Theater at the foot of the Washington Monument, will consist of a varied program to be offered by the Theodore Bekefi Dancers.

The Spanish Garden Ballroom, where Dave McWilliams and his orchestra have "caught on" as one of the best of Washington's "swing" bands, and the Crystal Pool continue the major attractions of the more than 50 amusement devices provided at Glen Echo Park.

'Easy Living,' Following Marx Brothers at Palace, Is Sufficiently Goofy to Preserve Marxian Tradition

Fast-Moving Screen Farce Boasts Ace Cast That Keeps Action at High Pitch; Lou Brown Moves Up; and So Does Former Local Amateur; Mal Hallett Coming to Earle Stage; "Going Native" Tryouts Start.

IT WOULD have been difficult to have hit upon a more appropriate screen comedy than "Easy Living" to follow the crazy Marx Brothers on the silver sheet at Loew's Palace Theater. "Easy Living" also is a comedy of goofiest ray serene, although completely alien to "A Day at the Races" in form, treatment and cast.

BELL.

"Easy Living" is a farce, pure and not too simple, with a background of automats, poverty-stricken office girls and the colossal wealth of big Broad street bankers, however incongruous that may sound. It is incongruous, as a matter of fact, but it is also no less than hilarious fun. The action, once under way, moves like a streak of lightning and the cast enters into the spirit of the thing in a manner that might not be suspected from a casual reading of its personnel.

Edward Arnold and Jean Arthur are the co-stars, with Mr. Arnold playing the rich banker and Miss Arthur the working girl he inadvertently, and almost disastrously, befriends in a moment of pique at his wife for having spent $58,000 for a sable coat which he tosses out of the window smack upon the head of the girl who is riding to work on the upper deck of a Fifth avenue bus and her last dime. When she tries to return this fabulous garment, Financier J. B. Ball makes her a present of it. That is the beginning of a series of adventures that romp along, as such things can in screen farces, with a cumulative piling up of frenzied and convulsing incidents.

In addition to the stars, the cast includes Ray Milland, as the millionaire's disowned son; Mary Nash, as his wife; Luis Alberni, as a hotel proprietor, whose hostelry takes a sudden jump in popularity on the strength of Mary Smith's living there and a gossip columnist having turned up the item that "J. B." also registered in over night; Franklin Pangborn, Andrew Tombes, William Demarest, William B. Davidson, always in the barber shop when the boss wants him; Nora Cecil and Robert Greig, most pompous of the cinema's butler's.

For the first time within my recollection, the "bit" players also are listed in the cast. The list is about a column long and, therefore, may not be reproduced here at this time. Some of them are very, very funny and all of them add to the unusual tempo at which this picture is played.

One of the most definite impressions that "Easy Living" creates is that Edward Arnold is better as a comedian than he is in the more serious impersonations of such legendary figures of the "Victorian era" as "Diamond Jim" Brady and Jim Fiske, a role in which Washington has not yet seen him since it is in "The Toast to New York," an RKO-Radio production not to be released until July 30. The way the former member of the National Theater Players tumbles about in this subject—meaning "Easy Living"—probably sent him to the hospital for repairs.

Jean Arthur is called upon only to get drenched in one of the most ornate shower baths ever conceived by the mind of man—with apologies to Cecil Blount De Mille—but is ideally cast as the office girl who doesn't know what it is all about. But she finds out! I should stamp this as Miss Arthur's best performance for the cameras, everything considered. This might go for Ray Milland, too.

Don't see it if you hate to laugh!

It will be of interest to his many friends in Washington to know that Lou Brown, formerly in charge of local advertising and publicity for the Loew theaters and more recently serving in the same capacity in Baltimore, has been moved up to the New York home office of Loew's, Inc. Lou will be attached to the same department he always has served, this time under the direct supervision of Oscar A. Doob, national director of Loew advertising and publicity, according to announcement made yesterday by Division Manager Carter Barron. No appointment has as yet been made to the Baltimore post vacated by Mr. Brown. Congratulations, fella, to you and to Shirley and to Shirley Lou.

A former member of the Capital's resident acting forces has moved on to a professional career. Harry Weatherby, a former member of the Columbia Players and of the Eckington Players, was a brief caller at the desk yesterday afternoon to drop word that he now is leading juvenile and featured singer with the Charles Hunter-Jack Pfeiffer Show Boat Players, performing under canvas through Virginia.

In Leonardtown, the Show Boaters were rained out by a cloudburst, but are having better luck in La Plata and hope for a continuance of the good weather break next week at Indian Head. The company changes bill every night. Such is the route by which aspiring young actors eventually reach Broadway.

The Condos Brothers, featured dancers in Wake Up and Live," and Enrico and Novello, popular ballroom dancers, have been added to the stage bill opening Friday at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Enrico and Novello replace Miriray and Naldi, previously announced, and the Condos Brothers will be offered as a special added attraction.

One of the most imposing lists of distinguished guests ever to find its way to a drama desk will lend luster to the premiere of "The Road Back," to be celebrated tonight at 8:45 at RKO-Keith's Theater. The White House, the President's Cabinet, both houses of Congress, the Diplomatic Corps, the Army, the Navy, District dignitaries and a generous representation of the National Capital's society and business circles will turn out in large numbers for this gala occasion.

When I say "in large numbers," I mean in large numbers. The list of acceptances fills five and a half pages of foolscap paper and reads like Washington's "Who's Who." Maybe the society department will be able to do something with it—it's too long for here, even on a slack day.

Reverting momentarily to the Earle, Mal Hallett and his orchestra, "America's first entertaining band," will be presented as the headline attraction of the vaudeville portion of the bill on Thirteenth street the week of Friday, August 6, according to word from Zone Manager John J. Payette of Warners yesterday afternoon. Teddy Grace, romantic vocal star; Jerry Perkins and the "Master Melody Man" are the specialists featured with the Hallett organization.

And from Loafer Frank La Falce, who usually makes these announcements for Mr. Payette, comes a vacationer's card from the Copake Country Club, Craryville, N. Y., as follows: "Exhausted from sheer laziness—and 24 hours a day to do it in." the lucky so-and-so.

First auditions for the new "Going Native" revue, to be staged at Loew's Capitol Theater next month, got under way last night in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel at 7:30 o'clock—precisely the hour at which Gene Ford, director, would like to have been preparing to attend the Variety Club-Washington Post charity boxing show out at Griffith Stadium. Well, Mr. Ford, as I have remarked many times before, life is like that.

The auditions, incidentally, are open to everyone over the age of 18, talent being the only requisite for acceptance as a member of the cast or chorus. They will be continued tonight and tomorrow night in the same place and at the same hour. There being no more fights, Mr. Ford, you will have to wish you could go fishing!

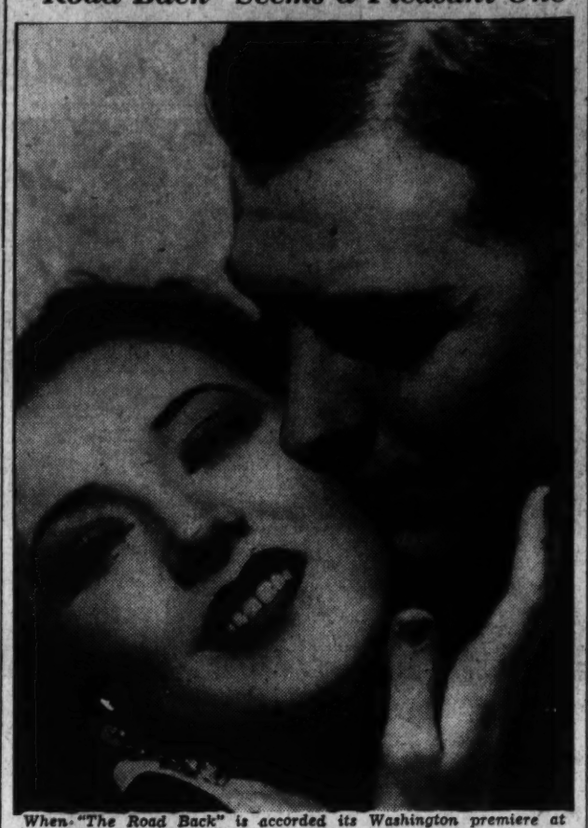
Aftermath-of-the-Fights Note.

By the way, where were you last night?

"Road Back" Seems a Pleasant One



When "The Road Back" is accorded its Washington premiere at RKO-Keith's tonight at 8:45, romance will be contributed to an otherwise slightly grim film story by Jean Rouverol and John King, affectionately posed above. The play is a sequel to Erich Maria Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front" and has been hailed everywhere shown as one of the "big" pictures of the year.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, July 21.—Settin' Around (Twentieth Century Fox): What a far cry this ultramodern studio, with its reinforced concrete office building, its electric power plants and its giant, air-cooled stages, is from the flimsy makeshift movie canneries of a dozen years ago! The whole place shrieks of "big business."

SONJA HENIE.

I chatted for a moment with Darryl Zanuck, boss of the works, about his production plans for the coming year—and the man tossed millions about in his conversation with the nonchalance of a New Yorker discussing the national budget. Somewhere in Africa, a studio unit headed by Mrs. Martin Johnson is filming scenes for "Stanley and Livingstone." Those scenes will run on the screen for only nine minutes when the picture is finished—but they will cost Twentieth Century $500,000!

Out on the back lot sets have been built to represent Chicago at the turn of the century. They cost nearly $150,000—and at the director's command a property man will touch a match to them while the cameras record the great Chicago fire. You will see it blaze on the screen for 5 whole minutes! On a nearby stage a little Norwegian girl is making retakes for a skating picture. The budget? Oh, about $1,000,000—and the studio paymaster's hand was perfectly steady when he wrote Sonja Henie a check for $100,000 for her work on that one film!

Pardon me—I am getting just a bit dizzy. I wonder if the old-timers who used to shoot a super-epic between Monday and Monday, for a total cost of $25,000, ever dreamed that out of their hit-and-miss efforts would grow an industry like that.

On the "Danger—Love Is Working" set, I watched Ann Sothern and Jack Haley wrestle with a long scene which involves the trickiest dialogue that ever two actors tried to master. In another take. They were still blew sky-high and jumbled a line. Finally, after more than an hour of mishaps, Jack managed to deliver his longest speech without a slip. But as he finished his closing line an expresison of incredulous triumph flooded his face. "Hooray!" he shouted, before Ann could make her answering speech, "I got it right that time." And the director wearily ordered another take. They were still shooting when I left the set.

Found Loretta Young, garbed in a man's bathrobe, sitting on the sidelines of the set where she is working with Warner Baxter and Virginia Bruce in "Doctor, Wife and Nurse." And when I commented on her odd costume, she told me mournfully that I was witnessing, in her, the victim of an inventive mind. "My own," she explained. Seems that she has always wanted to wear an evening gown with a long fringe of metal beads and persuaded the studio to make one for her use in this picture. "I'm wearing the gown, all right," she said, "but not between scenes. It weighs 45 pounds!"

In "Old Chicago" Alice Brady plays Mrs. O'Leary, the wash-woman whose cow kicks over the lantern and starts the great fire. I visited with her today and found her drinking one bottle of beer after another to offset the midsummer heat. Even Andy Devine, who is something of a beer drinker himself, spoke with great respect of her capacity, and pointed to her trim figure as proof that beer is not necessarily fattening. "Diets! Bah, they make me laugh!" Alice announced. "I haven't taken a glass of plain water for 20 years—I drink nothing but charged water, coffee, tea and beer. I never exercise, I never go to a masseuse and I eat whatever I want to eat whenever I want it. I haven't gained or lost a pound in all that time and I can't remember when I paid my last doctor's bill!"

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1937 15

Williams Sobs in Corner After Losing Game Fight to Steele

Charles "Hobo" Williams looked anything but like the "Alexandria Assassin" that he is called as he sat in his corner weeping after his fight with Champion Freddie Steele had been stopped last night in the eighth round. Here he is being consoled by his handlers.

Nats Check Plunge; Beat Chisox, 7-3

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, July 21.—Can you take it? Well, then, we'll try to break it gently. Despite the incredulity of it all, the Nats won a ball game this afternoon and put an end to their ten-game losing streak.

They won it, 7 to 3, from the Chicago White Sox who, until this date, owned a six-game winning streak and were regarding today's contest as a warm-up for the important series with the league-leading Yankees beginning Friday.

All of a sudden the defeat-groggy Nats reformed. Mel Almada banged the first pitch of the afternoon into the rightfield seats for a home run and a bit later in the same inning, Al Simmons blasted a home run into leftfield with a man on base and Washington had a 3-to-0 lead.

James Brooklyn DeShong, who had collected two defeats during the stretch of the Nats' losing streak, was the lad who finally ushered the Washington athletes out of their despondency. He gave 'em an inspiring six-hit pitching performance against the Sox.

Pomp and ceremony preceded the Nats' triumph. The Lions' Club of America, in national convention here, poured thousands of delegates into Comisky Park—gaudily-dressed Floridans in Seminole blankets, red-hatted Iowans, fully-outfitted Texas cowboys replete with six shooters; and bands were a dime a dozen.

Ceremony Precedes Game.

Before the start of the game, the Florida Lions presented Managers Bucky Harris and Jimmy Dykes with baby alligators and the Wisconsin Lions presented the two pilots with huge hunks of Wisconsin cheese which prompted one wag to remark as Harris accepted the cheese that the Nats' manager was already overstocked with the stuff.

Without warning, as I was saying, the Washington athletes after all these days, began to get tough. With a fine disregard for a young gale blowing in his face, Mel Almada belted Bill Dietrich's first serve for a line-drive homer and then, after Buddy Lewis had walked and Travis had flied out, Aloysius Simmons walloped one of Dietrich's pitches all the way into the upper deck in leftfield to make it 3-0.

But when the Sox started hitting, the Nats' lead began to shrink something awful. Jackie Hayes banged DeShong's first pitch for a single to center and a couple of pitches later, Mike Kreevich smacked a home run into the leftfield seats and it was 3-2. DeShong walked Walker, the next hitter, and with none as yet out, the Sox appeared bent on tying the score then and there.

DeShong Tightens Up.

But all of a sudden DeShong reformed. His pitching thereafter was a thing of beauty. For a stretch of six innings, the only hit he permitted was Zeke Bonura's harmless double to rightfield in the fourth. And he would have escaped damage in that sixth, too, but for the fact that with two out, Dixie Walker's routine grounder to Travis took a weird hop over the shortstop's shoulder and evolved as a cheap hit that led to a run.

The Nats knocked Dietrich out of the box in the third to boost DeShong's lead to 6 to 2. Cecil Travis started the fuss with a single to left and Bozie Berger helped the Nats along with an unpardonable muff of Johnny Stone's tame grounder. That gave Joe Kuhel a chance to bat and he batted a long triple against the leftfield scoreboard to score two of his pals. Then Buddy Myeer beat out a hit to Appling and Kuhel was home.

The Nats tacked on an entrely superfluous run in the seventh. They did it very simply. Lewis singled to right, Travis got a cheap hit on a crazy-hopping bounder to Hayes and Simmons singled to right. That made it 7 to 2, and the way DeShong was pitching the Sox were gone guys.

Yanks Beat Bottomley's Browns, 6-3

Wicker, Late of Newark, Goes Route; Koupal Walloped Hard.

St. Louis, July 21 (AP).—Sunny Jim Bottomley made his bow as a manager today, but the trouble was he had the same old ball club under him. As a result, the New York Yankees clubbed out a 6-3 win over Sunny Jim's Browns for their sixth straight victory.

In his first decision as successor to Rogers Hornsby at the helm of the Browns, Bottomley threw Lou Koupal at Murderers' Row and he never had a chance after Rookie Tom Henrich started the Yanks' 11-hit attack with a homer in the second frame. Frank Crosetti hit for the circuit in the sixth and the Yanks added another pair of runs each in the seventh and eighth to put the game on ice.

Kemp Wicker, just recalled from the Yanks' International League farm, at Newark, went the route for the New Yorkers and was rarely in trouble, although Joe Vosmik clouted him for a homer in the sixth and three straight singles brought in a run in the ninth.

Jake Powell was the big gun for the Yanks today, with two doubles and a single, although timely hits were produced by Henrich, who drove in two runs with his homer and a double, and Wicker himself who brought in two more with a single.

Joe DiMaggio stretched his consecutive game hitting streak to 22 in a row with a double in the eighth. Lou Gehrig, the league's batting leader, went hitless.

After the homers by Henrich and Crosetti had given the Yanks their first two runs, they collected two more in the seventh on a walk, Powell's double and Wicker's single. In the eighth, consecutive doubles by DiMaggio, Bill Dickey and Henrich brought in the final two tallies.

Bosox Defeat Tigers, 10 to 3; Foxx Hits Two

First Baseman Hits Fourth in Two Days; Bridges Is Pounded Freely.

Detroit, July 21 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, aided by Jimmy Foxx's twenty-first and twenty-second home runs of the season, snapped the five-game winning streak of the Detroit Tigers here today with a 10 to 3 victory.

The slugging first baseman, who also hit two home runs yesterday, got his first circuit smash off Tommy Bridges in the second inning for the first Sox run. His second, off George Gill who relieved Bridges, climaxed a six-run rally in the sixth.

Girls Tennis Play Again Postponed

Semifinal matches in the Playground Department's annual girls tennis tournament were postponed for the second time yesterday when the courts were deemed too damp for play.

The matches, originally scheduled for Tuesday, will be played today at the Chevy Chase Playground, Forty-fourth street and Western avenue, at 5 p. m. Finals will be played tomorrow at the same time.

The Fight by Rounds

FIRST ROUND.

Both men came out fast. Williams sent right and lefts to the champion's head and when Steel tied him up Williams sent a hard right to the midsection. Steele complained to the referee about hitting in the break. They exchanged rights and lefts to the body at the ropes and Williams was holding his own. A quick left hook sent Williams to the canvas for a count of two. Williams was up and sent Steele back on his heels with a left hook. They were really slugging.

SECOND ROUND.

Williams rushed out, but when Steele met him he began to bob and weave, then rushed the champion with a body attack. In an exchange of rights to the head Steele was shaken, but then Williams tied him up. Williams threw several lefts to the head which were wide of the mark. Williams hit hard to Steele's head with rights, but the champion bore in with rights to the head. Williams was breathing hard, but chopped him on the chin with a hard right. At the bell Steele pushed him to the ropes with rights and lefts. Steele's round by a slight margin.

THIRD ROUND.

Steele threw lefts to the head and was missing often as the round started. They went into a clinch and in a beautiful exchange of rights and lefts Williams held his own and then, Steele missed two rights to the head. Williams was smiling. Steele had the better of a clinch. They exchanged rights and lefts now, Steele chasing Williams with lefts to the head. The referee broke them from the ropes. Blood was flowing from Williams' nose. Steele was standing still waiting for Williams and gave a hard left hook for a soft one to the head, as the bell ended the round. Steele's round.

FOURTH ROUND.

They both came out slowly and Steele shot lefts to the head. A broad grin smeared Williams' face as Steele missed two lefts to the head. They danced around the center of the ring both missing lefts to the head. The referee breaks them. In a clinch Steele sent rights to the body. They are in the corner and referee breaks them again. Williams tied Steele up in a corner and had to be broken apart by referee. Steele appears to be waiting a profitable opening. He sent a hard left to Williams' face and Williams was on the ropes. Williams landed a solid left to Steele's head at the bell. Steele's round by a big margin.

FIFTH ROUND.

They came out slowly, but Steele looks the freshest of the two. Williams rushes and Steele pushes Hobo around with lefts, but Williams got in a hard uppercut and then a straight left staggered the champ. Williams is fighting hard now. He covers nicely in the clinch. They are on the ropes and the referee breaks them. Williams threw a left to Steele's body and they go into a clinch. Steele had the better of it. Steele nailed Williams with a barrage of punches to the head, but Williams can take it and was apparently unhurt. They clinch and referee breaks them. They clinch and Williams rushes him to the ropes. Steele misses two lefts then in another exchange of rights. Freddie has the best of it. Steeles' round by a slight margin.

SIXTH ROUND.

Steele misses lefts to the head and they dance around the ring. Williams got in a hard left to the head, but missed two more, then caught lefts to the head. Steele took a right to the body for a left to the head. The referee breaks them. Williams tied him up in his own corner and both were a little tired at this point. Steele was willing to swing and clinch, but suddenly caught three straight left hooks and Steele's knees wobbled a bit. Steele is giving Williams severe body punishment. Steele's round by a clear margin.

SEVENTH ROUND.

Steele waded into Williams as the round opens. Steele trying to put in a finishing punch, but Williams was willing to exchange with him and each took many rights and lefts to the body. Steele shot a left jab to the head and in the infighting Steele shot hard blows to the side of the head. Williams missed two rights, but connected with a left to the head, and another to the body. Steele missed two lefts to the head and Steele got a hard them. Just as the gong rang Williams rushes Steele to the ropes and the referee breaks them.

EIGHTH ROUND.

Both men rushed from their corners. Steele tried hard to connect solidly but failed. Steele is landing a terrific body punching. Williams' nose is again bleeding. Steele sent several blows to Williams' body, but they seemed to have little effect. Williams still smiling, but he was nailed with two hard rights before he connected with a good right to Steele's head.

Steele took a left to the head and scored. Steele missed a hard right. Williams took many rights to the head and lefts, before he staggered into the ropes. A right to the head and Williams is down for count of eight. He's down again and Steele gets a technical knockout.

Hobo Earns Plaudits by His Courage

Greats Mingle With the Proletariat and Cheer Local Fighter.

"Hobo" Williams, who has been called "Bum" from coast to coast and "Rube" from carnival to carnival, gave Washington, official and civilian alike, the right to hail him as "Champ"—of courage—last night as he gave 10,000 of the good burghers double satisfaction after they had deposited $18,563 into the Variety Club's till for the underprivileged children of the city

* * * *

Williams, a virtual unknown, performed in a ring against one of the craftiest champions of modern times and for nearly eight complete rounds the proletariat and bourgeoisie cheered him and they didn't quit after he had been spared from punishment by Referee Charlie Reynolds late in that eighth round, either.

Senator Hale, of Maine, sat side-by-side with Gerald P. Nye, pacifist advocate, who cheered a real fight last night. Jack Nichols, Oklahoma Representative; Senator Davie Walsh, of Massachusetts; Brig. Gen. Henry G. Reisinger, U. S. M. C., and Ken Romney, sergeant at arms of the House of Representatives, were just a few others who led the cheering.

Walter Johnson, without a hat to fumble, sat only eight rows from the ring, close to the pitching box where he rose to immortal fame as "The Big Train." He was caught often with his mouth agape, as the fighters stood toe to toe to maul each other.

* * * *

J. Edgar Hoover, ace "G-man" of the Federals, surrounded by a troop of his Federal agents, enjoyed himself immensely as he chatted and remarked about the fight with Congressional notables who sat near him. Former Senator "Wild Bill" Lyons and Hoover had great fun jesting with several youngsters who accosted them for autographs.

* * * *

Probably the happiest person in the entire stadium was one of the smallest, little Gertrude Gray, who, from her general admission seat, cheered her hero, Freddie Steele, to his collossal victory.

* * * *

Maj. Ernest W. Brown found his satisfaction in the flawless debut of Ray Bowen, former Boys Club boxer, who refereed several of the preliminaries. He remarked to several bystanders, "Isn't he grand. He acted like a veteran. He was the best man in the ring of all that entered as far I am concerned. That Williams certainly is a game youngster."

* * * *

Ted Husing, sports broadcaster, who received the largest round of applause extended to any one in the park, led the laughter that rocked the stands during the comical, though punishing scrap between the two colored middleweights, Prince Albert and Battling Zuzu. Prince Albert was as hard to down as a floating buoy, and though he was hit with everything but Husing's microphone he still was erect at the end of his four round massacre, which is more than can be said of some of the spectators who were stretched prone in the aisles from laughter, so hillarious was Albert's negative attack as he was swooning.

Variety Club's Charity Show Goes Over in Good Style; Caddore, Woods and Bullock Win Bouts.

By Bob Garrison.

In a real old-fashioned barroom slugging brawl, Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele, the pride of the Pacific Coast, won an eight-round technical knockout victory from Charlie "Hobo" Williams, Alexandria, Va., contender last night at Griffith Stadium in the feature event scheduled for ten rounds on the Variety Club's charity show, sponsored by The Washington Post. It was a non-title fight.

Although Steele took every round until the end of the fight, Williams was never in danger until he was declared unable to continue after he had been floored for a count of eight and another of three in two minutes and 56 seconds of the eighth round.

Williams, who had tried to nail the Tacoma, flash with a dynamite blow throughout, appeared willing to continue but Charlie Reynolds stopped it when Williams arose the second time.

Williams had given the crowd a chance to judge the calibre of the West Coaster by throwing everything in the books at him and weaving and bobbing under several hard blows. Although Williams bowed out suddenly, it was apparent that his best hope was to stay the distance when he was floored in the first round for a count of two.

Steele, calm and contemplating in each round, usually stood steady awaiting his openings and did not waste any motion when throwing his terrific rights and lefts to Williams' head. Occasionally Williams would better the champion in long range exchange of blows, but it was usually Steele who hit the harder and in the infighting Steele was complete master.

Without question the best toe to toe battling was given by the two middleweights that has been seen in Washington in a feature bout this year.

Each time skill enabled Steele to wear Hobo down when they clinched. Although both swung hard when hugging, it was here that Steele won the fight, so accurate were his rights to the side of the head. It was a hard right to the head as they came out of the clinch that started Williams on the road to the canvas.

Archibald, who twice has refused to meet Gentile in previously scheduled fights, was complete master and turned in to a slaughter after the third round. Gentile failed to connect with many rights aimed at Joey's head and caught stiff blasts in return, as Joey weaved in.

Gentile had been unable to compete with the biff-bang right and left hand attack of Archibald for two rounds and when Referee Denny Hughes stopped the scrap, at Gentile's plea he was a badly beaten fighter.

Gigantic Eddie Hogan, 224-pound New England protege of Jack Dempsey, scored a quick one-round knockout over Buck Everett, erstwhile local heavyweight champion, who stepped in front of a wild swinging left hook after 2 minutes and 50 seconds of the first round of their post-main event eight-round bout.

As the round opened, Everett seemed able to hold his own, but his weight, which was 51 pounds less than his conqueror's, proved too much handicap, and after he had failed to hurt Hogan with several rights to the body he ran into a salvo of blows, staggering, and then sank under a hard left.

Joey Archibald, the Providence (R. I.) featherweight, concluded the all-star card by winning over Harry Gentile, in one minute of the sixth round, by a knockout.

Eddie Caddore, Providence ring veteran, spotted Maxie Roesch, Texas youngster, 13 pounds and then beat him in their 6-round bout when he was awarded a split decision. He rallied in the last four sessions to overtake the lead Roesch had piled up with stiff lefts which he kept nailed to Caddore's square jaw.

Roesch, showing marked improvement, brought several rounds of applause from the assemblage with his sportsmanship after he had lost his balance. In the first two rounds, it was all Roesch, who had Caddore hanging on in the second round, but Caddore's experience carried him through the storm and it was not long before he was beating his handsome opponent to the punch.

Caddore began jumping a la Jack Rabbit in the fifth and sixth rouds, and Roesch, waiting patiently for an opening that would come should Caddore ever settle down, was completely non-plussed, being unable to land solidly. Although The Post score sheet showed that the fight might plausibly have been called a draw, Caddore was just a little too wise and strong over the six-round distance.

One of the gamest displays of fortitude ever seen in a local ring was displayed by one Prince Albert, colored light-heavyweight, of Jcksonville, Fla., who dropped an unanimous decision to Battling Zuzu, Washington, who substituted for Kayo Moseby.

Altho floored twice and beaten into insensibility throughout the four-round event, Albert, whose heart was as large as his foe's mammoth underpinnings, stood toe-to-toe and exchanged a bevy of blows, weak though they were, with his fresher foe. At the end of each round after the first he had to be led to his corner, but then came out the next round ready to dish it out again.

Walter Woods, sensational New York middleweight, gave the crowd a perfect demonstration of why he is considered one of the hardest punchers in his class when he knocked out Mickey Flannigan, Pittsburgh, Pa., with one solid punch to the jaw after 2 minutes and 20 seconds of the second round.

Woods was easily in a class by himself, and also outweighed his opponent 6 pounds.

In a four-round opener, Billy Bullock, of Washington, won a unanimous decision from the local ring veteran, Frankie De Angelo in a fight which saw both fighters cautiously swing lefts to the head and await openings which were few on both sides.

Master Lad Captures Feature at Delaware

Daring Ride By Jockey Cubitt Wins; Indomitable, Heavily Played Favorite Is Sixth; French Trap Second; Victor Pays $19.70.

By the Associated Press.

Delaware Park Race Track, Del., July 21.—Electing to come through a narrow opening on the rail, Apprentice Jockey Albert Cubitt sent Master Lad to the front in the early stretch and the gelding held sway thereafter to win the Red Clay Handicap, midweek feature at this track. The Star Master gelding, owned by W. E. Johnson, scored a length decision over W. Kirkley's fast-closing French Trap, with L. Carter's Black Gift third in a group of seven.

In winning his fourth race of the year in 11 starts, Master Lad had only a scattered backing and was cheered to victory by the chosen few who collected at the rate of $19.70 for each $2 investment.

Ideal racing weather and a well-balanced program served to lure a crowd of 8,500 to the Delaware plant. The running strip was in excellent shape, but the disappointing efforts of a number of favorites dulled the sport for many.

Indomitable, in the colors of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, was sixth in the feature, while carrying the bulk of the wagering. The Man o' War gelding broke well but dropped out of it and failed to be prominent at any stage.

Wise Sister and Valevictorian battled for the pace for 3 furlongs. Master Lad was fourth and seemingly hemmed in a pocket that would not open. However, Cubitt saw the slight opening inside the leaders and shot Master Lad through. The gelding emerged on top and responded to a drive to hold sway to the finish.

French Trap, a trailer to the stretch, came with a belated rush on the outside along with Black Gift, and the camera gave the former the second money.

Prince Alone, running in the yellow and black silks of the Glen Riddle Farm, lasted under a grueling drive of Jockey Nick Wall to win the Clark Gable Purse, better known as the sixth race.

Paying a $13.90 mutuel, the gelded son of By Eisself scored a half-length victory over Rouge et Noir which, in turn, downed Enamor by a head. Rouge et Noir and Enamor, teamed as the Burch entry, were installed the favorite in the wagering and the combination paid $3.50 to show and $3.20 to place. After Deflate and Sunset Girl had raced each other into submission, Prince Alone took the lead with a rush. Rouge et Noir, dropped far out of it in the early running, and Enamor, in trouble repeatedly, came with rushes on the outside but their moves were too late. Prince Alone ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:44 1-5.

Moralist, Dona Dulcin and Playoff came down to the wire as if they were pulling a chariot in the seventh race and the camera called them in the order listed. Moralist, the favorite at a $5.40 mutuel, came up on the outside after overcoming trouble. Apprentice jockey J. Vinas rode the winner which was clocked in 1:47 2-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Mrs. L. B. Deming's Vickson with Nick Wall in the pilot house made every post of the mile and one-sixteenth closing number, a winning one. The gelding paid $12.30, Two lengths back and closing gamely under the lash finished Mrs. J. Bowes Bond's Pencader, Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Sallandry, favorite, hung on long enough to be third.

Empire Track Feature Won By Nash Entry

Rainland First, White Tie Second; Mosature Trail in Feature.

By the Associated Press.

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., July 21.—For the second day in a row, a three-horse feature race was served up to patrons of the Yonkers Oval this afternoon. Rainland, from the Shandon farm of Richard and Patrick Nash; the Manhasset Stable's White Tie and Julia M. Loft's Mosawtre, all class B 3-year-olds, met in the Topstone handicap and finished in that order.

Mosawtre ruled favorite at 17 to 10. White Tie closed at 9 to 5 and Rainland was a well-played outsider at 2 to 1. He was backed down from 16 to 5. The gelding, which has beeen performing in class "C" competition, beat White Tie by a length and a half, finishing the abbreviated six furlongs in 10:09 2-5. Mosawtre was a dull-running choice, losing second money by six lengths.

Mosawtre, beaten off in the Empire City handicap his last outing, never was a factor in the running. Rainland jumped into instant command in a good start, but White Tie, away from the races since his third to Count Morse and Dellor at Keeneland last April, was right after the Chicago-owned sprinter.

Cubs Win 2 Battles With The Phillies

League Leaders Capture Double-Header, 4 to 1 and 6 to 0.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 21.—Philadelphia proved an easy hurdle for the league leading Cubs in their race for the National League pennant today. Chicago won both ends of a double-header before 10,000 fans, 4 to 1 and 6 to 0.

As the result the Cubs stretched their lead over the New York Giants, who were defeated by Cincinnati, to two full games.

Clever pitching by Bill Lee and French, coupled with timely hitting of their mates, made the triumphs comparatively easy for Chicago.

Jimmy Collins sent the Bruins off to a 1-to-0 lead in the first game when he hit his thirteenth homer of the year over the right-field fence. They were never tied or headed after that. Camilli gave the Phils their lone run in this game in the ninth, when he also hit his thirteenth homer of the season.

Dick Nichols Pitches 1-Hit Game for F. B. I.

Dick Nichols granted but one hit yesterday as F. B. I. blanked Treasury, 4 to 0, in a Governmental League game on the West Ellipse. For eight innings Nichols did not allow a hit, but in the ninth his no-hit dreams were cruelly shattered by a single from the bat of Graham with two out. Nicholas fanned ten men and walked but one.

Hornsby Out At St. Louis Has No Plans

Veteran Silent on Plans as Former Teammate Takes Over Reins.

St. Louis, July 21 (AP).—Manager Rogers Hornsby was deposed today as "Rajah" of the St. Louis Browns, bringing the brusque 41-year-old star to the probable end of a baseball career which reached unrivaled heights of individual play and team direction.

The apparent finish to Hornsby's 22 years in the major leagues came in a cryptic letter from Donald L. Barnes, president of the reorganized St. Louis American League team:

"For the best interest of the Browns, you are hereby notified that your contract with this company, dated November 24, 1936, is hereby canceled and terminated as of this date and you are relieved from duty as manager, effective at once."

"What was the reason for Hornsby's release?" Barnes was asked when he made public announcement of his action.

In the resultant swirl of rumor and report, one fact stood out boldly—the Browns' showing this year has been indifferent, although a marked improvement had been expected. With the season half over yesterday, the team was insecurely in seventh place, 29 games behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

By a quirk of fate, Hornsby made his last active appearance as a Brownie yesterday against the Yanks in the first game of a double-header. It was a sad finale for the "greatest right-handed hitter of modern times," whose lifetime batting average is .358.

With the bases loaded and none out in the tenth inning, Hornsby went in as a pinch hitter and rolled weakly in front of the plate for a forceout at home. The next batter hit into a double-play, ending the game.

Hornsby, former manager of three National League clubs, including the famous St. Louis Cardinals of 1926, came to the helm of the Browns in the middle of the 1938 season, succeeding Wade Killefer. Under his direction, the best the team could do was sixth place in 1934.

When Barnes and his associates took over the team at the close of the 1936 season, Hornsby was signed to a new two-year contract calling for a salary of $18.000 a year. The contract, however, Barnes explained, was worded so it could be terminated for cause at the club's discretion.

Men Past 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet Called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain, sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W. 45th St., N. Y. Ask for economy size. Save $1.

Bees Wallop Cardinals in Two Games

Rookie Pitchers Turn in Stellar Jobs to Win 5 to 1 and 2 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 21.—The fifth-place Boston Bees whacked the St. Louis Cardinals twice today with a pair of stellar pitching performances, 5 to 1, in eleven innings, and 2 to 1, and moved to within four games of the first-division Red Birds.

A crowd of 16,385 saw Lou Fette, spectacular rookie, limit the Cards to five hits in the opener and score his twelfth victory against three defeats when Ray Mueller hit a homer with the bases full in the second extra frame. Johnny Lanning limited the Cards to two hits in the nightcap.

Dizzy Dean, making his first appearance on the mound since incurring a toe injury in the All-Star game at Washington July 7, was the victim of Lanning's two-hitter. The tobacco-chewing Bostonian pitched eight perfect innings, loosening only in the fifth, when Johnny Mize tripled and Gutteridge singled for the only St. Louis hits. Previously, the Bees had amassed what proved to be the winning margin in the third when Lanning and Garms singled, and Rabbit Warstler, who had three out of four yesterday, continued his hitting streak with a double on the first ball pitched that drove in both runs.

Wheat Prices Advance With Crop Reports

Unofficial Estimates Indicate Heavy Damage to Spring Crops.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 21.—Spurred by unofficial estimates suggesting only 100,000,000 to 125,000,000 bushels 1937 domestic spring crop yield, wheat prices late today scored 1½ cents gain.

In sharp contrast and indicative of startling damage to United States spring wheat, were Government July 1 predictions of 150,000,000 bushels for the four leading spring crop States and 218,000,000 bushels of spring wheat in this country as a whole.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝@1⅛ above yesterday's finish, July $1.22, September $1.22¼@1.22⅜, December $1.24⅛@1.24¼; corn 7½ cents down to ½ cent up, July $1.16½@1.17, September $1.05⅝@1.06, December 76⅞@77; oats at ¾ decline to ¼ advance, September 34⅜, and rye showing 1½@1⅝ bulge, September 83¼. Provisions results varied from 12 cents setback to an equal upturn.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Turn Irregular in Less Active Trading, But Tone Holds Firm; Franc Drops Further.

New York, July 21.—Stocks paused for rest and in smaller dealings prices were mixed. Measured by fractions some net gain was made, but the bloom was off the speculation in the industrial leaders. September wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 122¼ cents a bushel.

After an irregularly higher opening, which lacked the buoyancy of recent sessions when Steel and a few other favorites were given good send-offs, the stock market went through a period of profit taking. Recessions in the main body of stocks were much less noticeable than in the pacemakers. Most of the time the majority were fractionally higher, but the realization that brakes could be put on made traders more cautious and diminished the trading volume.

No disposition appeared to give the market a good selling test and most of the professional operators seemed to hold the bull side in favor, even though they required a bit of rest. Losses of 1 to 2 points in Steel and a few other issues failed to shake the market and those stocks hardened in the last hour, as they have done in nearly every session for the last two weeks.

Public utilities retained some of their recently won favor. Buying of Consolidated Edison, American Telephone, Electric Power and American Power was noticeable. Railroads were mixed. The surge in New York Central disappeared, but the shares were steady. Santa Fe was barely firm, but Southern Pacific and Southern Railway held their ground. Union Pacific slipped a point. Baltimore & Ohio was quoted a fraction up most of the time.

Rail Burden.

The growing feeling that at least some increase in wages will have to be paid by the railroads is proving to be a handicap to investment in the stocks. In spite of the considerable rise in freight traffic this year the net earnings of the roads as a whole have not risen enough to support higher costs; they have not increased yet to the point at which old fixed charges can comfortably be carried. The prospect that the shareholder in the railroads will get any return on his money is not particularly bright.

Government bonds advanced a little further. The movement of French capital to London continued, if the exchange quotations meant anything, which suggests that the new proposals of the Chautemps government leave something to be desired. Francs sank to a new low price and sterling was firm, but failed to top the high price of yesterday.

Midweek trade news is good enough to maintain confidence in the business position. That is especially true of the steel industry, as surveyed by the Iron Age. That journal notes some fall in operations because of the season, but adds that "There is a very general belief in the steel trade that business will show no further falling off and that new buying in larger volume will make its appearance within the next few weeks." Steel scrap prices are hardening, but finished steel prices will be unchanged for fourth quarter, as announced by a United States Steel subsidiary. That alone will tend to promote consumption.

Seasonal Slump Ended.

Production of electricity is mounting to new high levels. Last week's output rose 9 per cent above the preceding week and 13 per cent over the corresponding week of a year ago. Distribution of goods is going on at a faster rate than a year ago, and the recent lull in commodity price increases suggests that higher consumption rather than the building of inventories is causing the expansion. Railroad traffic for the past week was greater than for that period a year ago, the larger crop movement being a factor. The larer the crops, combined with current high prices, the more active will become all business.

Purchasing power of the country has risen in the first six months of the year, although figures on actual sales must be salted with the factor of increased installment purchases. Buying ahead is itself an expression of confidence in larger income because of increases already realized. Motor sales in this country in June, for example, as estimated by the Department of Commerce, were nearly 10 per cent ahead of a year ago. In the six months the increase was more than 12 per cent, in spite of the strikes.

Gold.

Gold went no lower in London, but the strength in sterling lifted the American equivalent to a slight premium, which was sufficient to prevent engagements for shipment here. Yesterday a small amount was acquired in London for the first time since July 6. The decline in francs to a new low today continued to make sterling and guilders buoyant.

Gen. Electric Profit Up 58% For Half Year

Equal to 91 Cents on Common Against 58 Cents in 1936 Period.

By the Associated Press.

Schenectady, N. Y., July 21.—The General Electric Co. announced tonight that profits available for dividends during the first six months of 1937 exceeded by 58 per cent the figures for the corresponding period last year. The announcement, issued by President Gerard Swope, also said that sales billed for the first half of the year exceeded sales during the first six months of 1936 by 43 per cent.

Swope listed profits available for dividends during the last six months at $26,293,604 as compared with $16,592,324 for the first half of 1936. These profits, he said, were equivalent to a dividend of 91 cents a share on common stock against 58 cents last year.

Sales billed for the first six months of 1937 were listed at $171,076,645 as compared with $119,273,388 for the corresponding period in 1936.

A dividend of 40 cents a share was paid for the first quarter of 1937 and that an additional dividend of 40 cents will be paid July 26 for the second quarter. Dividends paid for the first half of 1936 amounted to 50 cents a share, he recalled.

Semiannual payments under the general profit-sharing plan will be made about August 2, Swope said, adding that the amount of profits available for this purpose is $2,253,730. Swope listed the number of stockholders as of June 25 as 195,048 as against 187,862 in June, 1936, an increase of 3.8 per cent.

Owens-Illinois Gain.

Toledo, Ohio, July 21 (AP).—Showing almost 50 per cent gain in business volume for the year ended June 30 as compared to the previous 12 months, Owens-Illinois Glass Co. directors today approved plans for the continuation of the program of expansion. Directors declared a dividend of $1 a share payable August 15 to holders of record July 30, a distribution of $2,661,204. The previous quarterly payment was 75 cents a share.

Net earnings of the company and its subsidiaries for the 12 months ended June 30 were $11,856,193 as compared with $8,776,340 for the previous 12 months' period, it was announced by William E. Levis, president.

Curb Prices Yield To Liquidation

New York, July 21 (AP).—A few sporadic run-ups marked an otherwise slumping curb market today. Selling on slightly accelerated volume pushed most stocks to fractionally lower levels. Utilities tried to stem the tide but with a few exceptions were gently washed downstream. Oils faltered while most of the industrial group gave ground.

Montgomery Ward "A" played a stellar role in the day's events climbing 2¾ points to 140. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. advanced ½ to 86½. American Gas & Electric, Arkansas Natural Gas "A," Northern States Power "A" and Standard Power & Light climbed fractions.

Sherwin Williams was hammered down 3⅛ to 135 and American Cyamid "B," Pittsburgh Plate Glass and McWilliams Dredging gave up slighlty over a point. Sunray Oil, Creole Petroleum and Aluminum Co. slid lower.

Western Electric Sales.

New York, July 21 (AP).—Sales of Western Electric Company for the first six months of the year were $97,355,000, against $65,651,000 in the comparable period last year, Edgar S. Bloom, president, announced today.

Cotton Futures Continue Decline

New York, July 21 (AP).—Renewed liquidation developed in cotton today, influenced by the favorable weekly weather report. Prices sold off to further new lows for the movement. December eased from 11.79 to 11.61 and closed at 11.63 with prices 16 to 9 points net lower.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil futures were adversely influenced today by the combination of lower cotton, lard and corn markets, together with continued favorable crop advices and rumors of a lower basis for crude oil. Scattered liquidation in nearby positions and refiners' selling was absorbed by locals and commission houses. Final prices were 5 to 8 points lower on sales of 87 contracts. Steel Prices Likely to Hold In 4th Quarter

Carnegie-Illinois Schedule Makes Only Minor Changes.

New York, July 21.—"Present prices on virtually all steel products have been reaffirmed for fourth quarter by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today, which continues:

An exception was made of galvanized sheets and possibly some other items, on which announcement will be made later. The announcement of unchanged prices specifically covered bars and small shapes, structural shapes, plates, tin plate and other tin mill products, strip, sheets, sheet piling, standard and light steel rails and accessories, car and locomotive axles, solid wrought steel wheels and semi-finished products for delivery in the United States by December 31.

"The seasonal lull in new steel business is beginning to have an effect on operations despite the presence of substantial backlogs in some products and the fact that plants that were recently affected by strikes have increased their output over that of a week ago.

"However, there are indications that the low point of summer buying has about been reached, and, in fact, there is already evidence of an upward trend in orders at Chicago, where companies that had no strikes report a gain, largely accounted for by automobile buying for new models. At Cleveland and Detroit also there has been a fair amount of buying by automobile companies. Ford Motor Co. has ordered about 50,000 tons of sheets, about half of the amount inquired for to begin an initial run of 250,000 cars when its assembly line resumes on August 9 on a 6,000-car a day schedule after a shutdown that began on July 16.

Operating Scale Uneven.

"The trend of steel operations is uneven, rises occurring in some districts and declines elsewhere. At Pittsburgh the rate has declined 1 point from last week to 85 per cent, but in the adjacent Wheeling district there has been a gain of 1 point to 96 per cent. In the Chicago area the rate is 84½ per cent, not quite as high as was forecast, the leading interest there have reduced output two points. In the Ohio Valleys, where the Youngstown Sheet & Tube plant has regained the production rate in effect before the strike, with Republic Steel plants also on a higher level, the average has risen from 75 to 77 per cent, but the Cleveland-Lorain rate has declined from 80 to 43 per cent because of the shutting down of the Lorain works of the National Tube Co. this week for vacations.

At Detroit, the Great Lakes Steel Corporation has put on two open hearths that were off last week and is running at 100 per cent, while the Ford steel plant is unaffected by the shutdown of automobile production. At Ensley, Ala., a sharp curtailment in steel output reflects the virtual completion of rail orders. For the country as a whole the rate of ingot output this week is estimated at 82 per cent, down 1 point from last week.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Sears, Roebuck Sales 17.4% Above Year Ago

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., today reported a drop from the previous period in gross sales for the sixth period of the company's fiscal year, June 19 to July 16.

Sales totaled $42,035,960, compared with $49,097,436 in the fifth period and $39,841,752 the sixth period of 1936. While the volume for the period this year was 5.5 per cent better than a year ago, and a new record for the period, it represented the least.

For the year to date, January 30 to July 16, Sears sales totaled $255,382,085, an increase of 17.4 per cent compared with the corresponding 1936 period.

American Bantam Car Ready for Production

Butler, Pa., July 21 (AP).—The American Bantam Car Co. completed its financial setup today and announced initial production would consist of quater-ton chassis, light trucks, coupes and roadsters. The company purchased the properties of the former Austin Car Co. last summer and has a capacity of 40,000 cars a year.

President R. S. Evans said the concern's assets exceeded $1,500,000 with one-third in cash and was free of all indebtedness except current liabilities of less than $15,000.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, July 21 (AP).—Silver futures closed easier, 20 lower. No sales. July, 44.65 nominal; September, 44.40 bid; December, 44.35 bid.

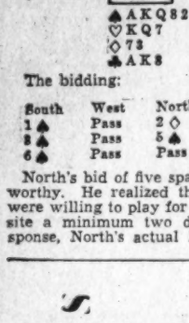
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A Guess—Plus.

One of the essential differences between the expert and the merely good player is the former's understanding of player psychology. The good player is "put on the spot" dozens of times a year without ever profiting from it. The expert is also embarrassed, but remembers the situation and finds a means of turning the tables when the proper circumstances obtain.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's bid of five spades is noteworthy. He realized that if South were willing to play for game opposite a minimum two diamond response, North's actual hand would furnish some play for a slam. He could not realize that his singleton Ace of hearts would furnish no ruffing value. South naturally accepted the slam-try.

West opened the Jack of hearts, and declarer summed up the resources of the combined hands in a few seconds. It did not take him long to decide that there was no way of avoiding the diamond guess.

The average good player would cash about four rounds of trumps, all of the hearts and all of the clubs before touching the diamonds. But this would make it transparent to the opponents that South had a diamond guess. They would give him no information and South would still have an excellent chance of guessing wrong as to which player had the Ace and which the Queen.

But South was an expert and knew how to put West on the spot. Taking the first trick with the Ace of hearts, he led a trump to his own hand. Without hesitation, a low diamond was his next play. South realized that if West had the Ace he would take it at once, fearing a singleton in declarer's hand. Therefore, when West calmly played a low diamond, South read him for the Queen, and finessed dummy's Jack of diamonds. Thus, a little elementary psychology relieved the expert declarer of a painful guess.

Opponents' Strategy Kills Court Program; Plan to Salvage Portion Is Studied

Senate Group To Meet Today In Emergency

Garner Concedes Victory to Wheeler; 'Procedural' Bill Proposed.

a motion to recommit. Its spokesmen want to leave the apparently doomed measure as it is on the Senate calendar, and to bring out a purely "procedural" court bill as a rider on another judiciary measure pending before the committee.

By "procedural," all concerned explained they meant reforms in lower court procedure that would expedite the ends of justice, diminish congestion and provide a new base for Government intervention in constitutional cases.

Favor Recommission.

While not opposed to a "procedural" bill, most opponents were adament against leaving the substitute court plan in a strategic position on the Senate calendar. They insisted it be returned to the Judiciary Committee as prelude to formulation of a modified court reform program.

As the opposition conference adjourned at 6:15 p. m., Wheeler said there was little to add pending today's Judiciary committee meeting and a further conference of court plan opponents.

"Our group is willing to work to bring out a procedural court bill," Wheeler said. "It is not in favor of doing anything at all to the Supreme Court, and it is not in favor of leaving the substitute court bill on the Senate calendar. If the bill goes back to committee, we are willing to work it out there."

"Bill Is Dead"—Wheeler

Wheeler said this did not necessarily mean a vote on a motion to recommit, but he added:

"We've got them licked. The judiciary bill is dead."

His statement was echoed by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, who also attended the conference.

"The battle for the independence of the judiciary has been fought and won," said Bailey. "We are now merely looking after details."

Barkley at his late afternoon conference with the press declined to discuss details of the legislative program ahead or to give his views on adjournment prospects.

"A lot depends on what happens in the court situation," he said.

He had no comment to make on reports Supreme Court enlargement is definitely abandoned. Asked what he thought of a Constitutional amendment substitute for it, he smiled and said: "You know a lot of them have been offered, and I never thought it paid to look a gift horse in the mouth."

Wagner Shows Uncertainty.

Barkley said plainly he favored leaving the court substitute bill untouched on the calendar. He suggested the Sumners bill to expedite Justice Department intervention in lower court cases, now pending before the committee, might be used as the basis for the new "procedural" bill.

Typical of the atmosphere of uncertainty as to procedure was a letteer written by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, replying to New York Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's opposition to the court bill.

Wagner, who had been expected to come out in favor of the court bill, delayed his reply for a full day, and then took no definite position.

"Due to the developments of the last 24 hours, there is uncertainty as to what proposals will ultimately be submitted to the Senate dealing with the judiciary," Wagner wrote Lehman.

"When any such proposals may arise, my first duty will be to study them. My second duty will be to vote upon them in a manner consistent both with safeguarding American institutions and with advancing those social objectives which epitomize my own life's work.

"In doing this, I shall follow the dictates of my own conscience and the counsel of my own experience."

Cites "Interests of People."

Wagner said he shared with Lehman "the firm resolve to maintain the independence of the courts" but he said his years on the bench persuaded him "judicial conduct and judicial institutions must be subjected to the same test as the other organs of our Government; namely, whether they are serving the highest interests of the people."

He said he felt he was in complete agreement with Lehman on "social objectives," but agreement on "methods" did not necessarily follow.

"I feel very strongly that we should phrase and express our disagreements about methods, with a view to both time and circumstance, in a manner designed to interfere least with the achievement of our underlying objectives in accordance with the spirit of our Government," Wagner said.

Borah Issues Warning.

As negotiations went forward toward a modified court reform measure, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, issued a brief warning in the form of a statement to the press.

"I am sure that no compromise can be made or even be considered," said the Idahoan, "which surrenders in the slightest degree the principle of an independent judiciary. Anything which looks like political control of the courts, either the higher courts or the lower courts, is not contemplated by the opponents."

Silent figure behind the move by "noncommittal" Senators to recommit the substitute court plan was John H. Overton, of Louisiana. Overton told yesterday how he had summoned the conference of "doubtful" Senators because he believed the Democratic Party was being "torn in two" by the court controversy.

Senator Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa, another member of the group, said he believed a Constitutional amendment was the preferable solution, although he previously had supported the substitute plan. He said he saw no need to "aggravate the fears" of many citizens that the substitute court plan would violate Constitutional tradition.

Supporters Discouraged.

Surprise, aggrievement and a discouraged attitude toward the whole legislative situation sprang from ardent court plan supporters, as the Administration modified its course.

Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, one of the authors of the substitute plan, said he was "inclined to let the whole thing drop."

"I don't think the bill packs the court, but I don't think the country should think we are packing the court," said Logan. "I suggested in the committee that the bill ought not to apply until after 1940.

"One thing I know is I'm sick and tired of Washington and of the court, and if the Nation wants to go bust, it's all right with me."

Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, when told of the change of plans, said, "If that is so, it is a complete surrender."

Meantime, Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Florida, one of the group of "noncommittals" who declared Tuesday for recommitting the bill, announced flatly against "any bill that would have the effect of duplicating any Supreme Court justice by reason of his age."

He said he took this stand in the best interest of his party and "to save a charge that an attempt is being made to 'pack' our courts."

Urges Amendment.

Andrews is author of a proposed constitutional amendment compelling retirement of justices at 75, and increasing the size of the court permanently to 11, with one judge from each of the circuit court districts. Last night he favored recommitting the court bill with instructions to the committee to report out a constitutional amendment along lines he proposed.

"If the Federal courts are to be fundamentally changed," said Andrews, "it should be done without building our judicial house upon the sand (in the form of a legislative act) which could be washed away by repeal even by the next Congress."

Andrews declared the substitute court bill "will not meet the traditional requirements of the American people, nor the preponderant approval of those best qualified to know the present and lasting needs of the country."

"Picture on Postage Stamp."

Said Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, an outstanding supporter of the original bill:

"I guess it's up to them (opposition)—they've got the votes.

"I guess if we get anything through, it will be nothing more than the picture of the Supreme Court on a postage stamp."

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, a first-termer but a strong supporter of the court bill, said:

"It looks to me like the session has about petered out, without accomplishing anything. We might still save something if we can get two or three bills through that amount to anything."

Consensus of opinion was that this session has not many more weeks to run. One Senator prominently identified with the Administration predicted the wage and hour bill and the Government reorganization program will be abandoned.

Lehman Is Silent.

Hot Springs, Va., July 21 (AP).—Thomas V. Brunchard, secretary to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, said tonight the Governor had no comment on the reply of Senator Robert F. Wagner to Lehman's request he oppose the Supreme Court reorganization bill.

Green Claims Victory Over C. I. O. in Toledo

William Green announced yesterday that an American Federation of Labor union had defeated John L. Lewis' C. I. O., 343 to 252, in a labor board election at the Interlake Iron Co., Toledo, Ohio.

The A. F. of L. president said the board had ordered the election at the C. I. O.'s request, over the federation's protest. The A. F. of L. union, he said, has had an agreement with the company for some time.

D. C. Tax Setup Shakeup Asked By Committee

paid personal taxes. The report said:

"The loss in Federal income taxes is almost nothing. This is so because the Federal Government goes after its money . . . The taxpayer knows the Government means business and he pays. The District of Columbia might well follow the same methods."

The committee's report recommended changes in two classifications: administrative and legislative. The legislative changes recommended are, in brief:

1. Give the Commissioners power to grant hearings to citizens who protest special assessments for alleys, sidewalks, sewers, water mains and other public improvements. The present law allows the Commissioners to give hearings only to those who protest assessments for roadway construction or improvement.

2. Allow the Commissioners to reduce assessments levied before the legislation recommended above is enacted.

Would Waive Interest.

3. Empower the Commissioners to waive interest and penalties on unpaid personal taxes when they believe such action to be in the public interest.

4. Empower the Commissioners to reassess property after a court has adjudged the first assessment to be confiscatory.

5. Limit to the first Monday in April the time for taking appeals from valuations of real estate made for taxation purposes. The present limit for taking appeals is the first Monday in June.

6. Allow payment on all special assessments, other than those levied in condemnation proceedings, to be paid in three equal annual installments, with interest of one-half of 1 per cent a month. Allow assessments made in condemnation proceedings to be paid in the five equal annual installments with interest of one-third of 1 per cent a month.

Close Tax Records.

7. Close the tax records to all except those who have an interest in the property about which they ask information.

8. Remove from the application of the statute of limitations all special assessments for real or personal taxes.

9. Limit penalties on tax-sale purchases to 1 per cent a month.

10. Authorize the tax collector, in the collection of personal taxes, to attach funds in banks and all other credits and intangible property in addition to goods and chattels.

11. Authorize issuance of liens upon real property of personal tax delinquents.

12. Absolve the tax collector from requirement of carrying on his books as assets unpaid personal taxes which the Commissioners have determined to be uncollectible.

13. Exempt the tax collector from personal liability in judgments arising from the conduct of his office.

Transfer Records, Bills.

14. Transfer duty of keeping tax records and of preparing tax bills from the tax collector to the assessor's office.

15. Adopt a modern accounting system which probably would violate an old statute which charges the assessor with preparing "annual tax ledgers on a numerical system."

The recommended administrative changes, of which there were nine, were revisions of the bookkeeping systems and installation of modern office machinery.

Barkley Voted Majority Chief Over Harrison

Wins by Single Ballot as Bilbo Causes Defeat of Colleague.

Arizona, who left a hospital bed to vote for Harrison, remained in a cloakroom until time for the vote and then went back to the hospital. Senator John H. Bankhead, from his home in Alabama, sent a proxy vote for Harrison.

Tellers read the little ballots off, one by one. The count was never more than a vote or two apart, and in the silence the Senators heard the total mount, vote by vote, until the count stood 37 to 37, with but one vote left unrecorded.

The teller's voice announced "Barkley." Applause burst out, and the faces of the court bill opposition group, at first glum, soon warmed into smiles. President Pro Tempore Key Pittman of Nevada, who presided, described the session as a demonstration of "glorious harmony."

Barkley, iron-throated and capable of making as many as 12 long speeches a day when campaigning, is a farmer's son. He was born in Graves County, in Kentucky's deepest backwoods, on November 24, 1877, and it was in his childhood he decided to become a clerk in a country store.

Envies Store-Clothes.

The reason was that he envied the clerks their store-clothes. He wanted to get a job like that, to "get dressed up and stay dressed up." Despite that early ambition, he is not a flashy dresser, and does not affect the somber formal clothes that some Senators choose, as he usually wears a pepper-and-salt suit of an indeterminate shade.

His first struggle was for an education, when he worked as a janitor in little Marvin College, a Methodist school, for five years in order to get through, spending his free time in studying old encyclopedias and dreaming of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, the great orators of the past, as he cut kindling, hauled out ashes and rang the school bell.

He next wanted to go to Emory College in Atlanta. So he got the county rights for a brand of earthen kitchenware and started out on a tall black horse to sell pots and pans to the backwoods housewives of Kentucky.

He sold the ware all right, guaranteeing it against cracking under heat. The only difficulty he had came when he made his next round with the ware and found that in nearly all cases the earthenware had cracked, so he had to replace most of the utensils he had sold with his new stock.

Goes to U. Va.

After Emory College, he went to the University of Virginia law school. Then he moved to Paducah, studied shorthand and became a court reporter. He next worked in the law office of William S. Bishop, the man whom Irvin S. Cobb made famous as "Judge Priest" in a series of short stories.

Barkley ran for county attorney in 1905, won; ran for county judge, won; ran for the House of Representatives in 1912, won with Woodrow Wilson; was an aggressive and earnest Democrat in the House, helping frame wartime legislation, helping pass the Adamson eight-hour railroad law; fathered the Howell-Barkley bill in the interests of railroad labor and fought for it continuously until he won; ran for the Senate in 1926, won.

Barkley was a dry by conviction, voting and speaking dry throughout the prohibition period until the day he stood on the Chicago platform in 1932 and as the keynoter of the Democratic Conventoin asked for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The convention went wild.

Voted for Soldiers' Bonus

His Senate record of service is one of continuous battling for progressive, and more recently New Deal measures. The only time he has voted against the President was on the soldiers' bonus legislation. He helped frame the securities and exchange act and the emergency banking act of 1933 and wrote into the utility holding company act the famous "death sentence clause."

He is in perfect health, knows his parliamentary procedure probably better than anyone in the Senate except Pittman and Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, and is ready for his job.

He has no particular addictions except that of willingly responding when his friends ask him to sing "Wagon Wheels" in his rich baritone. And he may even have to give that up, the story goes, because it is said that one of his friends asked, as the price of his vote for Barkley in the leadership battle, that Barkley either quit singing "Wagon Wheels" or learn another song.

Nazi Headsman Loses His Job As Germany Adopts Guillotine

By the Associated Press.

Magdeburg, Germany, July 21.—Nation-wide introduction of the guillotine for decapitating culprits condemned to death has cost septuagenarian August Groebler, Prussian headsman, his job.

The execution machine is a somewhat modernized edition of the guillotine which did its bloody work during the French Revolution. The executioner and his two assistants wear evening dress, with top hat and white gloves. After the presiding judge has announced the irrevocability of the death sentence to the culprit, representatives of the prosecuting and defense attorneys, the prison warden, attending physician and two clerks, one representing the prison authorities and the other the court, the executioner's assistants seize the condemned man.

His eyes are blinfolded and he is tied firmly to a plank somewhat shorter than himself. The plank then is tilted on a pivot from a vertical to a horizontal position, the neck of the culprit resting in a groove while his head—face downward—projects over a basketlike contraption.

The headman then releases the sharp, heavy blade which is poised above. It falls of its own weight, decapitating the criminal.

Nazi philosophy believes in severe punishment and there is no difficulty, apparently, in obtaining executioners. In the days of the empire and later the republic, executions in Germany were few and far between. One man sufficed for all Prussia.

That man was August Groebler, who conducts a flourishing laundry business in Magdeburg. Groebler, who is reticent and retiring, will not talk about his "trade." He is 70 years old and in his work as an executioner was attended by two apprentices and two journeymen. None of these, say residents of Magdeburg, quite qualified to succeed their master.

The change-over to the guillotine automatically solved the question of his successor: there will be none.

The development threw into discard Kroebler's trusted axe, with a white lily engraved upon it, which he carried about on his tasks in a velvet case.

Spark Caused Zeppelin Blast, Report Holds

Commerce Investigators Discount Possibility of Sabotage.

ductive qualities increased. Therefore, their contact with the ground under the circumstances would discharge the static accumulated on the ship."

A thunderstorm which occurred just before the disaster had raised the electrostatic quality of the atmosphere, the report said.

The committee reported that the question of possible sabotage had prolonged consideration.

"Sabotage has been examined under two classifications; the first external, including the use of incendiary bullet, high-powered electric ray, and the dropping of an igniting composition upon the ship from an airplane; the second classification, internal, including the placing within the ship of a bomb or other infernal device. To date there is no evidence that sabotage produced the grim result."

During the course of the hearings, the committee reported, the question of whether a brush discharge would produce sufficient heat to ignite an inflammable hydrogen air mixture was dwelt upon to a considerable degree. Since the time of the accident, the report said, experiments made at the high voltage laboratory of the Bureau of Standards have determined that it is possible to ignite hydrogen by a brush discharge "by using somewhat more intense discharges than those previously tried with a somewhat slower velocity of the gas passing the needle point" from which the spark was released.

The investigation was made and the report drafted by a special committee of three members appointed by Secretary Roper from the Department of Commerce. The members of the investigating committee were South Trimble, jr., solicitor of the Department of Commerce; Maj. R. W. Schroeder, assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Dennis Mulligan, chief of the regulation and enforcement division of the bureau.

The following technical advisers assisted the investigating committee in its examination: Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl, survivor of the Shenandoah disaster and commander of the ill-fated Akron; Col. C. de E. Chandler, United States Army; Col. Rush B. Lincoln, United States Army; Col. Harold E. Hartney, technical adviser to the United States Senate Committee on Commerce; Gill Robb Wilson, director of aeronautics for the State of New Jersey, and Grover Loening, aeronautical adviser to the United States Maritime Commission.

Germans Sit In.

Gen. Lieut. Friedrich von Boetlcher, German military attache, and six members of the German investigation commission sat as observers. The members of the German commission were Lieut. Col. Joachim Breithaupt, Dr. Hugo Eckener, Prof. Guenther Bock, Prof. Dr. Max Dieckmann, Director Dr. Ludwig Duer and Staff Engineer Friedrich Hoffman. Although the members of this commission testified at the hearings, they did not take part in the preparation of the report.

The investigating committee reported it was materially aided by the United States Navy Department; Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice; Weather Bureau, Department of Agriculture; Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce; New York City Police Department, the Bureau of Explosives, aviation companies, newspapermen, newsreel representatives and photographers.

Sabotage Still Discussed.

Lakehurst, N. J., July 21 (AP).—Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of the naval air station expressed the opinion today the element of sabotage still remained a possibility as a cause of the Hindenburg disaster.

Informed of the Bureau of Air Commerce report, which said the fire "probably" resulted from an electrostatic spark, Rosendahl said:

"It would be impracticable for me to make any detailed comment before I have studied the full report. However, unless they can definitely and positively ascribe it to some natural phenomenon or phenomena of an accidental nature, the element of sabotage still remains a possibility."

Naval Air Cadets To Report Monday

The Navy Department announced today the names of 74 aviation cadets who will report to Pensacola, Fla., for flight training Monday. Constituting the first class of the fiscal year 1937-1938, the students already have received preliminary flight training at Naval Reserve Aviation bases throughout the country.

Of the 450 cadets in six classes which will be trained at Pensacola this year, 315 are expected to complete the course, officials of the Navy Department declared. After being designated naval aviators the cadets will be assigned to duty with the aircraft squadrons of the United States Fleet for the balance of the four year service period.

French Bond Fund Is 6 Billion Francs

Paris, July 21 (AP).—The finance ministry announced tonight the newly-created fund for defense of government bonds had been given six billion francs (about $234,000,000).

The ministry said if the fund is abolished the money will be returned to the Bank of France to pay off part of the bank's advances to the government, which total 25,000,000,000 francs (about $975,000,000).

The fund was created through revaluation of the Bank of France's gold as a result of devaluation of the franc June 30.

The franc formerly contained up to 49 milligrams of gold, but will now have only 43 milligrams.

Carson, former Mayor of Riverdale, Md., was placed on the stand. He testified as a character witness in behalf of Peake.

In his address to the jury, Ogle Marbury referred to the mention of Ryon's name by defense witnesses. The prosecutor said:

"As a fellow member of the bar, I personally resent statements made on this witness stand that, in four cases which could not be explained in any other way, that Mr. Ryon did it. He was an honored and reputable citizen and member of the bar. He is dead and unable to appear here to defend himself."

The defendants were represented by Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate; Frank Hall, Thomas Van Clagett and George Burroughs, all of Upper Marlboro.

After their indictment, the six policemen were suspended from the force pending trial. Subsequently, however, the entire police department set-up was revised by act of the State Legislature.

Under the new act, 10 men were appointed to the force by the board of police commissioners, also created by the new act. Their appointments were made on the basis of educational and physical tests required under the new police set-up.

Possibility that any of the exonerated policemen may be reinstated on the force was slight, officials agreed, in view of the fact that all vacancies have been filled.

20 Hurt as Pickets And Workers Fight

Scranton, Pa., July 21 (AP).—At least 20 men were injured, three requiring hospital treatment, when pickets and workers fought with picks and stones today on a highway project at Dunmore, near here.

H. J. Williams, head of the Williams Construction Co., of York, Pa., which is building the highway, told police that men attacked a truckload of workers and assaulted 12 men. A short time later a second truckload was subjected to similar treatment, Williams said. Operators of steam shovels also were attacked.

A strike has been in progress for two weeks on the project, the result of a disagreement over wages.

Copeland Wins Support of Levy

New York, July 21 (AP).—Tammany Leader James L. Dooling, battling for control of Manhattan's ancient Democratic organization, tonight effected a realignment that made his chances of entering an anti-New Deal candidate against Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in the November election seem less hopeless.

In a last-minute shift which left only two opposing factions instead of three, Borough President Samuel Levy joined forces with Dooling in the latter's attempt to obtain the nomination for Senator Royal S. Copeland.

Whether this development would enable Dooling to swing other members of the executive committee who are demanding Grover A. Whalen as Tammany's candidate was unknown.

Wife Sees Laxity In Crater Search

New York, July 21 (AP).—Acting Commissioner Harold Fowler said today police would investigate charges of Mrs. Stella Crater of police neglect in the search for her missing husband, Justice Joseph Force Crater, who disappeared August 6, 1930.

The New York World-Telegram in a copyrighted story from Belgrade Lakes, Me., quoted Mrs. Crater as saying she believed her husband was murdered and that his murder was directly connected with his political career.
